Recalled Forces Named

SAIGON (AP) - The U. S. Command announced today the major units among the 50,000 American troops being withdrawn from Vietnam by April 15. They include the 1st Infantry Division, the 26th Marine Regiment and the 3rd Brigade of the 4th Infantry Division.

Also pulling out will be three squadrons of the Air Force's 12th Tactical Fighter Wing, Navy service support units and "a number of smaller combat support and service support units of all services," the command said.

These smaller units will include several artillery battalions and a civil affairs compant, it was learned. A 10 per cent out is also being ordered in many headquarters staffs.

Headquarters said the first units will begin moving out early next month. The 1st Infantry Division was the first Army division sent to Vietnam, 4½ years ago.

The latest withdrawal, the third ordered by President Nixon, will reduce the authorized U. S. troop ceiling in Vietnam to 434,000. It will bring the total number of American troops withdrawn since last July to 110,000.

The U. S. Command announcement said the 50,000 men being withdrawn in the next three months will include 29,500 Army, 12,900 Marines, 5,600 Air Force and 2,000 Navymen.

A weekly summary also issued today by the U. S. Command showed that American troop strength in Vietnam dropped 6,000 last week, to 467,500, the lowest since November 1967.

This is 16,500 men below the present authorized ceiling, but U. S. spokesmen said troop strength around the Christmas season always falls considerably below the authorized maximum because retation transfers to the States are expedited to get the men home for Christmas, while replacements are often delayed so the men can be home for the holidays.

Little fighting was reported today.

Official sources disclosed that American forces three weeks ago uncovered a major North Vietnamese communications center that intercepted at least 1,400 U. S. operational messages which presumably enabled enemy troops to escape U. S. ambushes, bombing and artillery strikes.

The sources said there was no evidence that the interceptions resulted in any American deaths. Nor were the North Vietnamese able to break any official codes, the sources reported. But they said many U. S. troops use unauthorized or "home-made" codes which the North Vietnamese easily deciphered.

The listening post was located in a bunker complex in the Bei Lei woods about 35 miles northwest of Saigon. The sources said 12 North Vietnamese who were fluent in English were captured and another was killed.

The American troops also captured legs showing interception of 1,500 U. S. radio transmissions, including positions for American ambushes and warnings to other allied aircraft of air strikes that were to be made.

Raid Closes Hat and Cane Club

A seven- man police raid Sunday night resulted in the closing of the Hat and Cane Club and the arrest of owner Charles Hampton and two employes on charges of selling non-intoxicating beer without a license.

The raid, which was led by Police Chief Arthur Bruce, was made after two off- duty officers purchased beer in the tavern. More than 100 cases of beer were confiscated. Forty persons were in the tavern.

Hampton was released on $300 bond. The employes, Betty Sairs and Barbara Davidson, were released on their own recognizance. They were turned over to Scott County authorities on state charges.

License to opeate the tavern were revoked Saturday by agents of the State Department of Liquor Control after Hampton failed to appear for a hearing on charges of selling beer to minors.

Hearnes Calls Overriding of Veto Kick in Teeth to Missouri

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) - Gov. Warren E. Hearnes charged Sunday that the everriding of his veto to $2.3 million in St. Louis antipoverty funds represented a "kick in the teeth" to Missouri.

"There's nothing more I can do," said Hearnes, who confirmed a day earlier that his veto of the funds was overridden by the Office of Economic Opportunity.

The overriding of the veto climaxed weeks of negotiations on terms to be included in an agreement whereby Hearnes would approve the funds.

Temporary accord was reached between the governor and OEO late in December, but Hearnes threatened to let the veto stand last week unless wording of the agreement remained as he chose.

Focal point in the controvery was the controversial St. Louis - St. Louis County Legal Aid Society, which will receive $390,000 of the federal grant.

Point one of an eight-point agreement called for OEO to prohibit Legal Aid representation of any political party or organization advocating overthrow of the government.

As revised by OEO, the point reads that Legal Aid will not represent any party or organization "in connection with any activity of such organization intended or calculated the assist or pursue the goal of the overthrow of the constitutional form of government."

In a letter accompanying the decision to override the veto, OEO Director Donald Rumsfield wrote to Hearnes, "I regret that you do not feel that you can accept these necessary changes and withdraw your disapproval.

Court Voids Youth's Murder Conviction

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The Missouri Supreme Court today ordered Joseph Franz Arbeiter freed from a murder conviction because what he told a juvenile officer was inadmissible as evidence.

Arbeiter was 15 years old in December 1963, when he admitted stabbing Nancy Zanone to death in St. Louis. The juvenile court decided he should be tried in circuit court as an adult.

But in the trial the testimony of juvenile officer Donald Jones was admitted as evidence. Jones testified that young Arbeiter admited he hurt the woman.

"In the light of the objectives of the juvenile code and of the procedures of juvenile courts and court officers," the Supreme Court said, "the prohibition of our statute should be held to include statements made to a juvenile officer and presented to and considered by the court in the disposition of the case. . .

"We must conclude that the state does not have available to it legally admissible evidence of the defendant's guilt. Therefore, the only alternative is to order the discharge of the appellant (Arbeiter)."

The opinion, written by Commissioner Robert R. Welborn, was adopted by the court's division as its unanimous decision.

Candidate Bans Court Agrees to Rule on Red

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Supreme Court agreed today to decide whether states may forbid Communist Party candidates to run for office.

The court also will rule on the constitutionality of the 1954 Communist Control Act -- the finding by Congress that the party is a menace to the United States and should be outlawed.

A federal court in Minnesota had ordered the state to allow Communist candidates for president and vice president to appear on the ballot in November 1968. But the court said it could not rule regarding future elections and declined to pass judgment on the 1954 law.

The American Civil Liberties Union then appealed to the Supreme Court in behalf of the Communist candidates, raising both issues. The appeal will be heard this spring and a decision reached by June.

Merchandise From Store Recovered

Footprints in the snow led to the recovery of $232 in whisky and cigarettes Sunday morning believed to have been stolen Saturday night from the Lindsey M and H Grocery, 863 West Malone.

Police reported two sets of tracks led from the store across the Missouri Pacific railroad to a shed in Sunset Addition on Young Street.

Entry into the store was made by smashing an eastside door. An inventory is being taken to determine the amount stolen.

Communication Strides Predicted

"Communications in the 1970s", were described to the Optimist club by Lawrence "Barry" Casey, chief switchman for Southwestern Bell Telephone company, at the Rustic Rock. Inn.

"The large increase of computers being installed today may well mean that the houshold shopper may shop from their home by telephone," he said. "This could include a receiving television set at your phone, and make it possible to make a selection from the store's counters."

All this and more, too, may be happen in less than 10 years, according to Casey. He said that there were 30,000 computers installed by the end of 1966 and they now are near the 85,000 mark. By 1985 they will reach 150,000, he predicted.

"It is already predicted by medical authorities that with our fast change in communications that cancer research there are already discovered clues to cancer control that no one has yet seen," he said.

Although now available in a large size it will be only be a few years when the communication systems will be pocket size and may even be as small as a wrist band.

President Glenn Greene announced that a meeting of all boys interested in the Optimist club college scholarship contest will be held in the G building at high school Thursday at 7 p.m.

Biafra's Surrender Ends 30-Month-Old Civil War

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) - Biafra surrendered today after fighting 30 months in an effort to enforce secession from Nigeria.

Maj. Gen. Philip Effiong, left in charge in Biafra by Gen. C. Odumegwu Ojukwu, told the nation in a broadcast: "I am convinced now he struggle must be put to an end and stop the bloodshed that is going on ..."

He said he ordered a disengagement of Biafran army units and asked commanders to stop fighting. He appealed to the Nigerian leader, Maj. Gen. Yakubu Gowon, for an immediate cease-fire.

He said he would apply to federal unit commanders at Biafra's edges for conditions.

Effiong, a 45-year-old member of the Efik minority tribe in Biafra, said: "any question of a gcvernment in exile is repudiated by our people."

The surrender broadcast followed the capture by Nigerian federal troops of Uli airstrip, Biafra's last link to the outside world. The strip came under massive air attacks that reduced its roadbed runway to rubble, according to reliable sources in Lagos.

Ojukwu, leader of Biafra in its 32 months of secession from federal Nigeria, fled Sunday for an unknown destination.

The informants in Lagos said that after federal ground troops captured Uli, Soviet-made Ilyushin 28 bombers flown by Egyptians rained 1,000-pound bombs on he jungle airstrip and M1G17s piloted by white mercenaries strafed the strip with cannonfire.

Nevertheless, Joint Church Aid headquarters in Copenhagen, Denmark, said two of its planes were able to land at Uli with 20 tons of food and medicine early today—apparently before the massive air attacks.

Military sources said casualties were heavy among Biafrans who had assembled by the thousands in the area of Uli in hopes of getting out of the enclave, whose secession stemmed from tribal conflict after Nigeria became independent from Britain in 1960.

Biafran regulars continued to resist in the hours before the surrender broadcast.

Federal marine commandos reached Uli Sunday night, after bypassing the nearby town of Oguta, Lagos' informants said.

Ojukwu had fled, saying in a recorded broadcast he was going in search of peace and that he hoped to return soon. Reliable reports said he had taken his family with him.

In the surrender broadcast, Effiong said:

"I have had extensive consultation with leaders of our community, both military and civilian, and I am now convinced that the present bloodshed and suffering must stop."

Effiong said the leaders who had spoken of negotiating—presumably Ojukwu and his advisers—had left and therefore he decided to confer with other leaders to reach his decision.

There was expected to be little resistance to Effiong's capitulation among war-weary Biafrans.

He said, "Our people are now disillusioned."

Immediately afterward, a communique asked police offers to report to specific stations for further instructions.

He said a Biafran negotiating team was prepared to meet a federal team to work out terms of the surrender.

Britain and the United States readied a massive airlift of food and medicine as soon as the Nigerian government gave the word it would admit the planes.

A British Royal Air Force plane was scheduled to leave London today witn 20,000 pounds of medical supplies, the vanguard of new government relief efforts for the war's victims. A British cabinet minister was dispatch to consult with Nigerian officials on the relief program, and preparations were made to send in British medical teams, army trucks for convoys, and engineers to help repair roads, bridges and airfields.

President Nixon ordered eight C130 cargo planes on a standby alert in the United States, with foul helicopters to be carried as cargo. They awaited word from Lagos that the Nigerian government would let them operate a relief lift.

Canadian Foreign Minister Mitchell Sharpe said his government also was making plans to provide transport, food, medical supplies and military observers to help achieve a just settlement.

Hard fighting continued in he southeast corner of the former British colony as Biafran regulars resisted the progress of federal troops. Military spokesmen in Lagos said there were heavy losses on borth sides.

A radio report from the French colony of Gabon, to the south of Nigeria, said the latest Biafran capital - Orlu- had fallen. Reports from Gabon added that panic- stricken members of the Biafran elite shouldred aside relief workers for the escape seats on the last relief planes leaving Uli.

"Your leader has fled," federal radio broadcasts told Ibo tribuesmen, backbone of the secession movement. It urged them to stay at home and await the arrival of federal troops to ensure their safety. Maj. Gen. Yakubu Gowon, Nigerian chief of state, appealed to the secessionist troops to stop fighting and report to federal commanders. He told his own forces to take special care of displaced persons and urged them to adhere strictly to the code of conduct.

A federal communique said Gowon had "warned all foreign governments, organizations and persons to desist forthwith from meddling in the internal affairs of Nigeria so that the suffering of the population in rebei- held enclaves should not be prolonged."

Ojukwu's destination was not known. There were unconfirmed reports that he had flown to the Portuguese island of Sao Tome, the base for Red Cross and church airlifts to Biafra. Other Biafran cabinet members arrived in Libreville, the capital of Gabon.

I-55 Stretch Up For Jan. 29 Letting

JEFFERSON CITY — Gov. Warren E. Hearnes reports on the latest developments on Interstate 55 from information supplied by Chief Engineer M. J. Snider.

Snider said that a 10.3 mile section in northern Ste. Genevieve county is included in a Jan. 29 letting. Although it was described as an expensive project the engineer expressed hope that acceptable bids would be received so that this contract can be awarded.

The only other uncompleted stretch south of St. Louis to the Bootheel between Fruitland and Festus is 20.4 miles in Perry County, where the engineer said progress on right- of- way acquisition is slow, and it appeared that the highway department will be forced to file condemnation suits against more property owners on the two sections of 93 and 11.1 miles than is normal.

"To date, we have been able to acquire only 63 per cent of the right- of- way by negotiation," he said. "Normally this figure should be about 85 to 90 per cent. Since funds are available at this time for these two sections we will continue to exert every effort to negotiate for as much of the right- of- way as possible. We will then file condemnation."

Perot Offers $100 Million to Free POWs

WASHINGTON (AP) — H. Ross Perot, the Texas billionaire who failed in getting two plane loads of supplies to American prisoners held by North Vietnam, has come up with another unusual plan—$100 million offer to buy the captives' freedom.

Perot said Sunday he had made the offer, similar to the tractor deal made with Cuba for release of the Bay of Pigs prisoners, in a cable last week to North Vietnamese Prime Minister Pham Van Dong.

Until release of the prisoners is worked out, Perot further offered to supply everything needed to run the prisoner of war camps. And to sweeten the pot, he offered similar nonmilitary goods for needy North Vietnamese civilians.

He told of his offer on "Issues and Answers," an ABC television interview program.

Later Perot said he wished the $100 million figure, which he stated in an answer to panelist's question, had not "gone out over television."

But he insisted he would do anything he could to get the men freed.

"Cost is not the key issue," Perot said at a later news conference. "The key issue is will the North Vietnamese begin talking—is there something they need more than the men."

The offer Perot made to Hanoi was "to build needed facilities and supply food, medicine, or other items needed by the North Vietnamese people in exchange for the release of prisoners of war."

"If these proposals are not acceptable to you," Perot cabled Pham, "surely there is some basis on which you will agree to work directly with the people of the United States, allowing us to exchange items badly needed by the North Vietnamese people for these prisoners."

There has been no response to the offer, Perot said.

Asked if he would go as high as $100 million for a prisoner exchange, Perot said, "I certainly would. I know I could raise that much." He said that would average about $75,000 per man and he said it would be worth it to save the lives of the prisoners.

Perot said he became dedicated to the prisoner problem when "I met a 4½-year-old boy who had never seen his father."

Last month Perot spent more than $600,000 taking two chartered airliners on a 30,000-mile odyssey with gifts and messages for the prisoners. After flying to Bangkok, Thailand, Vietiane, Laos, and Copenhagen, Perot was forced to give up Dec. 31 when the Soviets refused him permission to deliver the gifts to Moscow for mailing to Vietnam.

Perot, 39, a Naval Academy graduate, parlayed a $100,000 investment into a fortune in the computer industry.

Soviet-China Word War Heats

TOKYO (AP) — The war of words between the Soviet Union and Red China heated up over the weekend with a Chinese protest note accusing the Russians of plotting to create two Chinas and a Russian broadside charging the Chinese Communists with "rabid anti-Sovietism."

Peking's official New China News Agency reported that the protest note delivered in Moscow accused the Soviet leadership of cooperating "with U.S. imperialism in the criminal plot of creating two Chinas."

The evidence offered by the Chinese was that news media of "the Soviet revisionist renegade clique" have described Formosa as a country. The Chinese— both Communiss and Nationalists—consider the island a province of China, to be reunited with the mainland when either regime gets control of both.

The Soviet counter-attack, the third such verbal broadside against the Chinese in six days, was loosed Sunday in the Communist party newspaper Pravda.

"Militarization of the country's entire life is under way on the pretext of a Soviet threat," Pravda wrote of Communist China. It said the Chinese press is teeming with calls to "get ready for war and natural calamities...intensify preparations for war."

Final Kidnap Suspects Caught

TEXARKANA, Tex. (AP) — Police burst into an apartment Sunday night and captured two men charged in the kidnaping of a 16-year-old girl.

The last of five men sought in the kidnaping, the two were identified as Booker T. Burkhalter, 24, alias Terry Anderson, of Dallas, Tex., and Jonnie Tasby, 21, of Lafayette County, Ark. When the officers entered, the two were lying on a bed watching "The FBI" television program.

Herbert Hoxie, special agent in charge of the FBI in Arkansas, said the men offered no resistance. They were unarmed.

They had been charged earlier in Thursday night's kidnaping of Karen Vickers, pretty, auburn-haired daughter of a Texarkana, Ark., grocer. Police said she was taken from the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Emmett Vickers, by three armed and masked men and held for 26 hours for $40,000 ransom.

The girl was freed unharmed Friday night at a Texarkana motel. The ransom was not paid.

The FBI earlier arrested Paul Lawrence Bryant, 21, and Joe Willie Beggett, 29, both of Dallas, and Hugh Mulzac Smith, 26, of Texarkana, Ark.

Jumbo Shakedown Flight Ends

LONDON (AP) — Pan American Airways' Boeing 747 Jumbo jet airliner touched down safely at Heathrow Airport today, launching a new era in the mass moving of the world's restless millions.

The Jumbo carried 361 nonpaying passengers and 19 crewmen, the largest number of persons ever to cross the Atlantic in one flight, as a dress rehearsal for the first regularly scheduled commercial flight between New York and London Jan. 21.

The touch down was late because of a three-hour delay in New York due to the traffic jam at Kennedy International Airport and "heavy paperwork," said Tom Flannigan, Pan American vice president for operations.

The passengers were Pan American employes and their families, and some families and officials of the U.S. Federal Aviation Agency.

Cervantes Calls for State to Share Tab

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Mayor A. J. Cervantes suggested Sunday night that the state begin picking up its share of the tab in view of Gov. Warren E. Hearnes' "active part" in operating the St. Louis police Department.

Cervantes' suggestion was in reference to Hearnes' appointment last Friday of Delbert Miller Jr. to replace Edward J. Walsh on the board of police commissioners.

The appointment was seen as insurance for selection of Lt. Col. Eugene Camp to succeed retiring police chief Curtis Brostron. Walsh was expected to favor Maj. John Doherty as chief.

"The governor has the ri t to select a board of commissioners," Cervantes said. "And when the state is so forthright in enforcing the law, it should also pick up its share of the operating cost."

Hearnes' appointment of Camp was also criticized over the weekend by two state senators from the St. Louis area, Republican A. Clifford Jones of LaDue and Democrat Raymond Howard of St. Louis.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!
MISSION IMPOSSIBLE!

The unsuccessful mission of Texas industrialist, H. Ross Perot, to attempt to deliver Christmas packages to American servicemen being held captive by the Communist North Vietnamese should serve as an object lesson to those who still doubt the heartless nature of Communism. It would not harm the Reds to allow the prisoners - of - war to receive these gifts. In fact, it would be a propaganda victory for them to do so.

We were disturbed to hear that the Texas philanthropist was considering giving the packages to North Vietnamese orphans as a gesture of goodwill. It is highly probable that the orphans would never see the Christmas presents. If indeed they did, they would unquestionably be told by our enemy that the gifts were due to the benevolence of the "People's government."

There are enough war orphans in the South of Vietnam to be cared for first. There were many orphans behind the lines in Germany and Japan during World War II, but our obligation was to the children of the liberated areas, first and foremost. The same may be said to the war in Korea, or in any conflict. Caring for the suffering in enemy territory is a luxury that can be afforded after aid and assistance has been extended to every victim in the free territory.

We, therefore, hope that if Mr. Perot is considering this alternative it will be decided not to give the supplies to the Hanoi government or its representatives, but to turn them over to the best of the abilities of our soldiers. Any pressure that would be eased from the burdens of the Northern Communists would only hurt the changes for an early settlement of the war, and in the end cost more lives ... and product more orphans.

As the Sixties draw to a close, we are now facing the challenges of the Seventies in which the prospects for peace (and war) are uppermost in our minds.

President Nixon inherited the Vietnam war from Kennedy and Johnson administrations and has started the U. S. pullback from Vietnam which is due to be sharply accelerated. Withdrawal of an additional 200,000 U. S. troops is in the cards for 1970 and only massive and sustained offensive by the Communists would upset this timetable.

The Middle East is being watched as the most perilous point for an outbreak of war in 1970. What are the prospects for a peaceful settlement of the 22 - year - old Arab and Israeli conflict in the year ahead? Virtually nil is the opinion of diplomatic observers on both sides of the battle lines.

Experts also say that the possibility of China - Russa conflict has brought Russia and American negotiators together in Helsinki to discuss reduction of the multibillion dollar nuclear - arms race. By midyear, American negotiators believe it should be clear whether the Russians are ready to bring this competition under control.

This may, at first glance, sound gloomy but continuing reports give evidence that many things may be looking up.

SKIDS CAN BE AVOIDED ACCORDING TO EXPERT

"I skidded" is seldom a good excuse for a traffic accident, according to a prominent accident investigator.

F. William Petring, former Chief of the Vehicle Performance Branch of the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads and now a Michigan engineering consultant who specializes in investigating and re-constructing auto accidents, says that in almost every skidding accident the driver was at fault.

"While there are exceptions, a skid is almost always induced by some action on the part of the driver," Petring said. "Any change in speed or direction can bring about a skid, and these changes are usually caused by careless driving techniques such as over-braking, over-steering or over-powering."

When pavements are slippery he urged drivers to develop a sense of "feel" for the road to learn just how much traction is available. "By applying the brakes gently or by a quick, momentary throttle applications, the driver can learn immediately whether the car has any tendency to skid or 'fish-tail.' If it does, reduce speed and do all maneuvering – steering, braking, accelerating -- with a gentle, delicate touch," Petring advised.

Most important, when faced with an emergency situation on a slippery pavement, don't panic and slam on the brakes. This will lock the wheels and invariably cause a skid. Instead, pump the brakes with a rapid, intermittent action. This keeps the front wheels rolling and maintains steering control," he said.

A long - time member of the National Safety Council's Committee on Winter Driving Hazards, Petring added that these techniques are especially important during the winter months when pavements may be covered with hardpacked snow or ice. "Tests by the Council have shown that braking distances on glare ice may easily be as much as nine or ten times the normal, dry pavement distance," he reported. "Even with the help of traction aids such as snow tires, studs and chains, far slower than normal speeds are essential."

He said the Council's tests have disclosed that conventional snow tires are of little or no help in stopping on glare ice. Studded snow tires, on the other hand, reduce braking distance on ice by 19 per cent and provide about three times the pulling ability of regular tires.

"For severe snow and ice conditions," concluded Petring, "reinforced tire chains provide the ultimate in traction, reducing braking distances on ice by 50 per cent and providing about seven times the pulling ability of regular tires on ice."

A Prophet in His Time

It is not necessary to turn very far back into history to be reminded that great innovators and discoverers in science, medicine and education have faced ridicule and rebuff. Sometimes the rebuffs have been cruel. But each generation has had its entrenched establishment which scorned change and it is no different in our own time.

Despite the fact that there are literally thousands of grateful parents across this land who have raised their voices in praise of Glenn Doman and Carl H. Delacato and the Institutes for the Achievement of Human Potential in Philadelphia, spokesmen for the entrenched withhold their acceptance and pronounce petty dissenting opinions. Never mind that those opinions ignore the fact of thousands of youngsters who have benefitted from the Doman and Delacato programs.

For years these two men have been treating brain-injured children. They have demonstrated that their concepts will work, also, in solving such rampant ills as poor reading ability and other perceptual shortcomings. In recent years some institutions of higher learning, such as the University of Plano, in Texas, have applied their theories to higher education with great success.

The essence of their solutions is that a child, or student, develops neurologically in the first four or five years of life. An injury, premature birth, or environmental deprivation, may deter the youngster from traversing the inexorable pathways of development that every child must experience. When this happens, even though the boy or girl has good native intelligence and a sturdy body, he or she becomes a poor student, ill- adjusted to complex modern life.

Doctors Doman and Delacto go to the cause and let the symptoms fall away. If the student missed the developmental necessities in those first four or five years, he is taken over the pathway now. Nature permits this. There are strident voices in the established medical and related hierarchies which refuse to accept the testimonials of students, and ignore the successes that have enthused families in virtually every community in our land. Instead of heralding the breakthrough, they minimize, impugn, disparage and deter.

One wonders how long the innocent brain-damaged children of this generation must wait for this hurtful contrariness to subside.

Overcoming Price Resistance

The following observations were made by W. Heartsill Wilson, sales consultant, at a recent sales rally:

"In the casinos of Las Vegas you will never find a clock. Clocks remind us when it is time to stop working - they keep us from accomplishing anything. They'd soon go broke there with clocks on the walls."

"Almost anyone can make a living from 9 to 5. We're in competition with the world during those hours. But your measure of success is what you do from 5 to 11.

"If you use those hours to further your career, you can't help but succeed. It's true that you are in competition with the exceptional people from 5 to 11, but there are so few."

"I have yet to shake the hand of a successful businessman who was in a business that he didn't like."

"In the mind of every human being are two black boxes. One is marked Value and one is marked Price. When a salesman begins to talk, the prospect dusts off his two black boxes and soon the boxes begin to change in shape and size. Not until the box marked Value is larger than the one marked Price will a sale be made. This is an unfailing law. It is the salesman's job to build the value of his product until it overshadows the price tag."

"Well, Sarge," said the private,"if that crocodile is even half as scared of me as I am of him, then the water in that river ain't fit to drink."

When he arrived in Vietnam in the early 1960s, the American intelligence officer was surprised to see a Vietnamese riding a donkey – while his wife, loaded down with bundles, trudged along behind. Upset at the lack of chivalry, he approached the man and asked: "Why do you ride while your poor wife walks behind?"

"Custom" grunted the man, jogging past.

A few years later, the officer was visiting the same village and spied the man again – he was still riding the donkey , but now his wife preceded him down the road.

"You probably don't remember me," said the officer,"but you told me a few years ago that your wife walked behind you because of custom. But now I see she's in front. Why the change?"

"Land mines," came the reply.

THE RESULTS OF HIGHER EDUCATION

Those who criticize our youth should not over-generalize. Many young people are patriotic, hard-working, and self-reliant.

Instead of only criticizing, we should try to determine what has caused some of the attitudes of young people today. A recent survey gives some interesting answers to this question.

This survey studied attitudes of young people, dividing them into those attending college and those who were not. A sharp difference was found between the two groups.

Seventy-one percent of non-college youth believed that belonging to a church was important, but only 42% of college students. Sixty percent of non-college youth believed that patriotism was important, but only 35% of those in college. Sixty-nine percent of the young people questioned who were not in college believed that "containing communists is worth fighting for," but only 43% of those in college.

The first thing we should learn from these statistics is that by no means all college students have developed erroneous attitudes. But we should also realize that college has a bad effect on many young people, causing far more of them than of those not in college to reject sound values.

One of the reasons is the disdain for values common among many college and university professors. Another is the large number of anti-American professors on college and university faculties, especially those supported by government funds and grants.

Parents should do all they can to teach their children sound values and patriotism, and they should support and send their children to only those colleges which will maintain those values.

Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — James Joseph O'Connell and a couple of his bachelor friends had rented a cottage on Cape Cod for the summer and were enjoying the hectic social life at Hyannis.

The fly in the ointment was a guy named Wimpy. Wimpy was fat, obnoxious and—above all else—greedy. Though not a resident of the cottage, Wimpy seemed to spend more time there than its legitimate occupants.

While there, he ate their food and consumed vast quantities of their beer.

The three roommates held a small gathering one Friday night. It was to be the trio, their dates and few selected guests— Wimpy not included. But you didn't have to invite Wimpy— he could smell free beer a mile away. He arrived early, waddled directly to the icebox and grabbed a beer.

That night Wimpy was in good form—two six-packs himself. This forced James Joseph into an unplanned trip to the local grocery for supplies.

Unfortunaely, the grocer had only one case of an obscure Midwestern beer left and it was warm. James Joseph squeezed the whole case into the freezer compartment.

Luckily, they didn't have to wait for it to cool. A friend arrived with another case already chilled, and James Joseph promptly forgot about the beer in the freezer.

He remembered it when supplies, thanks to Wimpy, began to get low again. The case was frozen solid. A man of ingenuity, James Joseph shoved the beer into the oven and turned it on.

Fortunately, still another friend showed up with a cold case— enough to see the pary to its end.

When jjames Joseph returned from taking his date home, he was greeted with a series of explosions from the kitchen. He had forgotton to remove the beer from the oven. Only about three cans had exploded. He placed the good cans in the icebox.

The next afternoon, James Joseph got the urge for a cold beer. He opened one of the baked cans, now just the right temperature.

One taste was enough. It tasted like low-grade bilge water. Too bad, thought James Joseph, a whole case wasted. Then he got an idea.

He raced to the grocery, purchased another case of that obscure Midwestern beer and stashed it in the icebox.

Wimpy arrived in the late afternoon.

"Got any cold beer?" he asked.

"Yup," said James Joseph. "I'll get it."

James Joseph went o the icebox, grabbed one of the baked cans and three of the good cans. He gave the baked beer to Wimpy and distributed two to his roommates who had been cued.

The roomates drained theirs as fast as they could and put in an order for another round. an order for another round.

"How about you, Wimp—another?" James Joseph asked.

"Er, no thanks. Still got some left," Wimpy said.

Wimpy nursed that one beer for four hours, while the other jovially quaffed dozens of cans.

In ensuing weeks, that case of beer became a prized possession. James Joseph and his roomates did have to switch to that obscure Midwestern beer, but it was worth it just to be able to say on one of Wimpy's less and less frequent visits:

"Wimp, can I get you a refill?"

"Er, no thanks, I've still got some left."

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON - Like every belly looking out.
President before him, Richard Nixon has issued directives, delivered pronouncements, dictated memos and otherwise sought to bestir the vast federal bureaucracy.

He has put on a personal show of efficiency and has sounded solemn warnings that he expects renewed vigor from all federal workers.

But also like every past President, Nixon has made little impression upon the bureaucrats who respectfully note the presidential stirrings and then go on doing as they have always done.

Thoroughly frustrated, he fusses over the negative attitudes of most bureaucrats, fumes at their can't - be - done responses to his new ideas and chafes over the bureaucratic inertia he has encountered.

In exasperation, he has complained that government officials "spend one-half of their time writing papers to each other." He cites, as an illustration, the excess paper work that Washington demands from local and state authorities in return for federal grants. Over 30 major steps, involving more than 100 different forms and reports, often are required for a simple $1,000 grant.

–INSIDE THE WHALE–

Nixon's predecessors must be smiling indulgently on high. Franklin D. Roosevelt after struggling with the Naval bureaucracy compared the encounter to "boxing a featherbed." Dwight D. Eisenhower, who masterminded history's largest war, wound up on the losing side in what he called "the battle of Washington." And John F. Kennedy wryly likened his experience with the bureaucracy to "grappling with a whale."

Now comes Richard Nixon to grapple with the whale. After a year of valiant struggle, he has found himself in the whale's belly looking out.

The bureaucratic phenomena is wondrous to observe. Like a giant amoeba, it sort of slurps along, a shapeless blob, following the path of least resistance. It pushes out in every direction, and its substance flows into the bulges.

When it encounters a morsel, the bureaucratic amoeba flows around it and absorbs it. And when the bureaucracy can no longer contain its own bulk, it simply divides – one into two, two into four, and so on. Today one amoeba, tomorrow 16.

From another view, the federal apparatus resembles a marvelous, monstrous factory, which is engaged in the manufacture of a single, basic product; Confusion.

–THE FUDDLE FACTORY–

Call it the Fuddle Factory.

The maze of bureaucratic wheels, cogs and gears, spinning in different directions, often countering each other, would delight a Rube Goldberg. All the whirling and whirring creates the illusion of great industry. For all its movement, however, the Fuddle Factory goes nowhere.

The actual deminsions of the bureaucracy are known to no man, but some inklings can be gained from the 1967 Census of Governments. These figures show that an astrounding 81,299 government entities now exist in the United States. The breakdown:

U. S. government	1
State governments	50
Local governments	81,248
Counties	3,049
Municipalities	18,048
Townships	17,105
School districts	21,782
Special districts	21,264
Grand Total	81,299

All of which lays to eternal rest the notion that a missle is the most complex contrivance known to man. For each of the 81,299 entities of government is a moving part. within each entity are other moving parts, wheels within wheels, all going round and round.

–BUREAUCRATIC BEGINNING–

Consider the U. S. government. George Washington started out with nine executive agencies, employing a grand total of 1,000 federal workers. From this small bureaucratic beginning, the federal government has spread and swollen into a crazy patchwork of nearly 2,000 agencies, each itself a conglomeration of bureaus, sections, divisions and committees.

Out of sheer desperation, President Nixon has threatened "massive personnel cuts in every area of government." This betrays a certain naivete, however, about the bureaucracy's powers of self - preservation.

The Fuddle Factory constantly finds more, not less, fuddling to do. Lacking constructive work, the Fuddle Factory turns inward and produces for itself rather than for the people it is supposed to serve. Hence the bureaucratic dictum: expand or expire.

The Bureau of Indian Affairs provides an example. On the Pine Ridge Reservation in western South Dakota, the Oglala Sioux are recipients of $8,040 per household in bureaucratic services. About 1,400 government officials work full - time on the reservation, and an additional 425 work part-time. This doesn't include additional hundreds who work in district, area and regional offices.

The Fuddle Factory, then, could provide a live-in bureaucrat for every Oglala family.

Thus has fuddling become a fine art – from the most remote reservation to the fuddle capital of the free world in Washington.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

OUTSIDE LABOR:
See Cosa Nostra In Yablonski Killings

PITTSBURGH - It is outrageous for anyone to charge that the United Mine Workers leaders were involved in the execution of the Yablonskis. These were "hard" killings in the grimmest, smoothest, swiftest Cosa Nostra fashion. They were not the angry fashion of the miners who go for dynamite, blow off a back porch, or pepper man and house with shotguns. That's tradition.

Certainly the slayings could have come from the hands of a psychotic who read the script in Truman Capote's "In Cold Blood." But it's far more certain that these were mob murders. That's what the clues say to the professional probers.

First, the Yablonskis' fine house was cased for weeks. Obviously the killers knew every family move and habit of this UMW leader's routine.

When the killers came they cut the phone wires – so no communication if the victims weirdly survived for even a few moments after the gunmen left. They cut and deflated auto tires – so no chase over the narrow, curving roads. They killed the women – so no outcry or call for help. They wasted few bullets, went for the head, in Mafia style. They picked up the cartridges – so no trace. And cleverly they chose New Year's Eve.

So there are federals who believe that these were pistols for hire – and the contact was made easily in the Mafia - laden, brutally controlled Southwest Pennsylvania Cosa Nostra combines.

Who hired them? Who would gain from the deaths? Whom did Joseph Yablonski threaten? With whom did he break?

These answers are vital not because there are unsubstantiated innuendos being hurled at UMW President W. A. (Tony) Boyle, from whom sympathy is as scarce as ice skates on the Nile, but because a feud is flaring which would make Hatfield - McCoy appear like a Palace Theatre vaudeville team. These ghastly murders could be the first of other killings springing from fury and revenge.

What motives would agitate the national mine union chiefs? The 64-year - old President Tony Boyle won – not lost – the election. The Labor Dept. has officialy decided not to investigate or set it aside, despite the request of Yablonski's lawyer. Thus Mr. Boyle could retire at 65, at a $50,000 annual pension. Furthermore, there are no federal investigations now endangering his control. There is an Office of Labor - Management and Welfare - Pension Reports division review of the mineral books. But the Justice Dept. has found no reason for criminal action. There is a civil suit for accounting of UMW funds. Little will come of this. And there are some charges of misuse of money involving special invoices for political contributions. But this was rectified and no government action is expected.

Jock Yablonski lost. The record shows that inside labor losers fade away. Remember Jim Carey of the electrical union and David McDonald of "steal." Who would molest them? They've faded. They've become unpersons in labor. So it would have been with Joseph Yablonski inside the miners though he was an official for some 35 years.

Who then would gain from these killings? Certainly not Tony Boyle or the UMW. Certainly not the labor movement.

Who feared Jock Yablonski? There are no federal probes under way in his arena. He was not about to testify or go secretly with information before a grand jury. Even dead, he cannot be silenced. There is his attorney, Joe Rauh, and his technical advisor on "black lung disease," Ralph Nader. They know what Yablonski knew. They were his brain trust, his passion, his battering rams ever pushing government agencies and Congress. And there are his two bitter and enraged sons. Certainly all these men would not hesitate to pour out what they know.

Were there, then, other forces pressing Yablonski? Could they have been from "the outside"? What did they want of him? They must be powerful and calloused to killing. It takes lethal skill to make contact with a contact who then goes to an intermediary to "make a hit" – especially such a killing and especially, too, by such professional assassins. Also it takes money – lots of it.

There will be answers to these questions eventually. But it will take time. There are at least two, perhaps three, killers. There is a driver for the getaway car. There are payoffs to be made.

However, these answers can't be wrought out of rage. Or from wild charges inspiring feuds, strikes, demonstrations. They'll come out of methodical investigation. And it is an educated guess that they'll lead no outsiders.

So the time has come to cool it – and for all sides to sit with the authorities and pool their information. Fighting an election for a $50,000 union presidency in a multimillion - dollar labor organization is one thing. But wildly trying to hang a triple - murder charge on anyone is another. It could only help the killers and their hirers and those who plan terror as a weapon inside labor.

Amateur Astrologist Predicts Problems For Armed Forces with Zodiac Parallel

Dear Ann Landers: I am an amateur astrologist who has had considerable success forecasting events for my family and friends. I was horrified when I read of President Nixon's lottery plan for selecting draftees for the United States Army. The thought of an entire batallion of men born under the same sign gives me the screaming meemies. It would, of course, be ideal if the sign augured well for patriotic action, venturing into the unknown, and following orders blindly. A combat unit of men fortified with the courage and confidence of a favorable horoscope would be impossible to beat. But what if the horoscope should warn against hazardous activities, venturing into unfamiliar areas and taking risks? Are you aware, Ann, that millions of people in this country refuse to make a move before consulting the zodiac to see if the stars are positioned favorably? It is not inconceivable that if the horoscope bade ILL, entire companies of men might rise as one, remain in their bunks and refuse to budge.

Do you have any views on this? - Zoe D. Ack

Dear Ack: Sherman was right. War is hell. No matter how the guys are selected. I doubt that a four-star astrologer in the Pentagon would improve the situation, but I'll pass your theory on to General Hershey.

Dear Ann Landers: I have been happily married for fifteen years. Before I knew my husband I was involved, intimately, with two men. I've never mentioned these relationships to my husband, although he is beautifully mature and would probably have been most understanding. Now, the problem:

Last week while shopping in a crowd I saw one of the shadows from me past. I have no idea if he saw me because I ran from the store like a criminal escaping the police. After I gathered my wits, I was ashamed of myself. This man was a friend as well as a lover. Now I wish I had behaved like a lady, greeted him graciously, asked about his family and told him about mine. On the other hand, maybe I was smart to leave well enough alone.

Had I encountered the other man from my past it would have been a different story. Ours was a sick love-hate affair. He was really a skunk and I have no kind feelings or warm memories of him. Furthermore, he's the kind of a louse who would probably make trouble for me.

I am upset and troubled by my childish behavior. Yet, maybe I did do the right thing. If I run into my former friend-lover again should I greet him graciously or should I avoid him? - Agonizing In Fort Wayne.

Dear Ag.: Your spontaneous reaction was an emotional one. It was undoubtedly rooted in an indefinable fear of him or, more to the point, of yourself. Now that you can think about the situation rationally, you are ashamed of yourself for not behaving maturely. If you should encounter your old friend again you could probably handle the situation with maturity and grace. I would not recommend exchanging phone numbers or suggesting that the two families get together socially, but I would hope you could greet him and behave civilly.

Alcohol is no shortcut to social success. If you think you have to drink to be accepted by your friends, get the facts. Read "Booze and You - For Teen-Agers Only," by Ann Landers. Send 35 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

PRESIDENT AND GREAT AMERICAN CELEBRATE DAY
HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Mrs. Mary Grimes, who was 107 Friday, received a telegram of congratulations from someone else celebrating the same day - President Nixon.

Nixon, who was 57, said it "was flattering to know that my birthday coincides with that of such a great American lady."

Mrs. Grimes, who lived on a farm near Cuero, Tex., before moving to Houston 15 years ago, received a birtday card from President Lyndon B. Johnson on her 105th birthday.

Her daughter, with whom she lives, said she is very independent and refused to leave the farm as long as she could care for herself.

Mrs. Grimes reared nine children and a granddaughter.

Drug Abuse Discussed By Harmon at Meeting

NEW MADRID — A small vial of a drug placed in the city's water supply is potent enough to send all inhabitants "on a trip," Detective Sergeant Dan Harmon, head of the drug and narcotic division of the Cape Girardeau police force, told a meeting Thursday of the Woman's Club.

In his talk on drug abuse and explaining the potency of drugs, Harmon said a minute amount placed on the point of a pin is enough for ten "trips."

Sgt. Harmon told of the increasing problem of youth drug addiction, and gave crime statistics attributed to maintaining the clostly drug habit.

He was critical of persons who are advocating legalizing drugs. He said countries where drugs once were legal and are now banned expressed amazement the United States would consider legalizing drug usage.

Laxity by the Mexican government, Harmon noted, made drug smuggling control a greater problem for the United States.

The group was shown a display of illegal drugs, syringes and equipment used by drug addicts. Following his talk, questions by the group were answered by the sergeant.

Mrs. Robert Seemann, president, presided during a business meeting. Nine members answered roll call by naming a drug. Mrs. Douglas Trerice was a guest.

A donation of $150 was made by the club to the junior high band uniform fund being sponsored by the American Legion. At the request of band director, Bob Donze, a committee of Mrs. Jim Edwards, Mrs. Leo Hedgepeth and Mrs. Charles Hatley, was named to assist in selection, purchase and distribution of the uniforms.

Mrs. Seemann was hostess for the meeting. Mrs. F. M. Baird and Mrs. Hatley served as co-hostesses.

ONLY A SINGLE QUEEN...
BLETCHLEY, England (AP) — One thing Bletchley's carnival queen won't be this year is married.

Married women have won the title two years in a row and town fathers say it isn't fair to single teen- agers.

"Single girls haven't been able to compete against the self-confidence of a married woman," said Cecil Bowden, a carnival official, explaining why the contest is being restricted to unmarried entrants.

"You can't really expect girls of 17 and 18 to have the composure or experience of a woman of 25 with a couple of children."

Cook's Column

Pork chops, which are good simply rolled in flour and fried, are a real taste treat when seasoned with lemon, onion and spices.

SWEET LEMON CHOPS
one medium white or yellow onion
one or two lemons
4-8 pork chops, about ½ inch thick
powdered sugar
nutmeg
salt and pepper
flour

ROLL chops in flour and brown in skillet in hot fat. PLACE on baking sheet (I prefer broiler tray, but any flat pan will suit). Salt, pepper. SPRINKLE about ¼ teaspoon nutmeg and 1 Tablespoon powdered sugar on each chop. SLICE lemon and onion about 1/8 inch thick. Put a slice of onion topped with a slice of lemon on each chop. BAKE at 350 degrees about 30 minutes. Serve hot.

SHORT CUT: Use lemon-pepper seasoning and onion salt instead of fresh onion and lemons.

NOTE: Save end of lemon after slicing. When finished handling onion, rub lemon on hands to take away onion smell.

SUGGESTION: Serve with sweet potatoes baked at 350 degrees until done (about 45 minutes with skins on). Split potatoes and butter, salt and pepper, as you would white potatoes.

For desert, place drained pineapple slices in a bowl and pour one can of sweet, red cherries into them. Set back, and allow pineapple to redden. Serve with pound cake and whipped topping.

TOO MANY, WAY TOO MANY!
ST. LOUIS (AP) — A young nurse in the medical section of the police department says she's not bitter over sweets - just certain she'll never order another box of them through the mail.

In attempting to help a cousin promote a project for Campfire Girls, Geraldine Norris said she ordered 250 boxes of chocolates from a company in Chicago.

Instead of the 250 boxes, Miss Norris said, she received 250 cases amounting to three tons of candy with a retail value of $6,000.

Miss Norris, who's also preparing for a Valentine's Day wedding, said efforts to return the cargo to Chicago were to no avail.

She is attempting to locate a group interested in selling the candy.

WELL/PRESERVED
LAFAYETTE, Colo. (AP) — Tom F. Jones, 41-year-old paper salesman, said 30 photos from a 36-shot roll of camera film turned out well. He considered this very good, since the film came from a camera that had lain in a mountain wilderness more than two years, ever since Jones was hurt in a fall in Roosevelt National Forest while hiking. He found the camera about 30 feet from where he had fallen.

Designer Says:
Jewelry Should Flatter Proportions

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Marianne Ostier, who has been designing jewelry for 31 years, finds it second nature to look at the jewelry worn by every woman she sees. And often she'd like to — but doesn't — step up and say, "No, no, you ought to be wearing . . ."

A lot of the mistakes she sees have to do with proportion, Mrs. Ostier says. "If someone with a short neck wears long ear clips, the neck looks still shorter. If the woman with a long neck wears small ear clips that go up into the face, her neck appears too long.

"If a woman has short hands and wears a very small round ring, her hands look much shorter. With a high ring, you can elongate the finger. The marquis shape, widest in the center and tapering to a point at each end, is ideal for short fingers.

"And a bracelet that is worn on a heavy wrist should be a big bracelet, to make the wrist look smaller."

Although Mrs. Ostier often uses diamonds in her designs, she feels "diamonds don't do that much for a woman. They show a lot of glitter. But colored stones have much more influence on a woman.

"Eighteen carat gold is a soft color and becoming to wear; sometimes it has one or two diamonds to accentuate it."

Mrs. Ostier advises women to consider their profile when choosing jewelry to wear around the face. It is her opinion that button earrings do nothing for the profile.

A sculptor when she married a jeweler in Austria, Mrs. Ostier went back to school to learn jewelry design. One of her first ideas — which proved one of her most successful and the most copied — was that the application of sculpting ideas could move jewelry away from flatness. Diamonds used to be set down into the metal, greatly reducing their sparkle because little light could get to them.

She began using metal on more than one plane and she set stones up on stems, so that a flower pin, for example, took the shape of a real flower instead of being as flat as the photograph of a flower.

The Ostiers moved their jewelry business to the United States in 1941, and she had been carrying it on alone since her husband's death two years ago. But business details, which were her husband's province, so frustrated her that she decided to close shop. Some 405 pieces of jewelry still on hand were sold at auction at Parke-Bernet Nov. 19 and 20.

Her jewelry pieces are one-of-a-kind, "because I always had enough ideas to go on to something new." However, in the sale was a diamond starburst broach similar to one given to Julie Nixon Eisenhower for a wedding present. Mrs. Ostier duplicated that piece "because everybody wanted to see it."

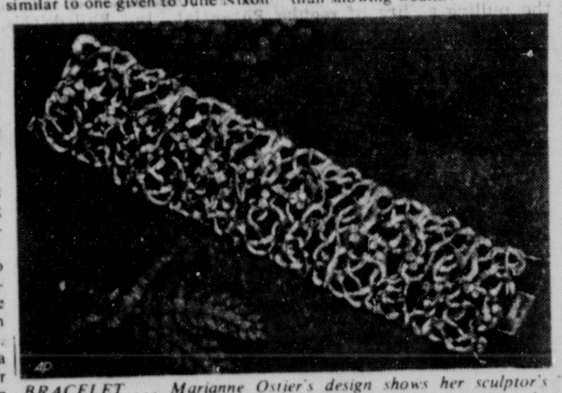

Her favorite color is purple and the jewelry stones she usually wears are amethyst and turquoise, both of which are becoming with soft purple dresses and both of which are flattering to her skin color. The turquoise also brings out the green of her eyes.

Neither amethyst nor turquoise are among the five gem stones Mrs. Ostier listed eight years ago in her book, "Jewels and the Woman". (They are diamond, ruby, emerald, sapphire, pearl.)

She says:

"With jewelry one has more possibilities to stress one's own type than with anything else.

"The aim of jewelry is to make women look more beautiful, to flatter them. I'm so conscious of color and becomingness; if one wears something that is becoming, one is much more comfortable than showing wealth."

BRACELET . . . Marianne Ostier's design shows her sculptor's approach to jewelry. The various twists of gold are not all on the same flat plane; the piece of jewelry is large, yet seems feminine because the open quality of the work gives it a light, airy feeling.

DENVER (AP) — Prior to his marriage to Jane Giardino of Denver, London-born Sydney Smith decided he wanted a wedding cake from Harrods in his home city.

But store officials told him they couldn't guarantee safe arrival. So Smith flew to London, and he and his sister, Marsha Smith, brought back the three-tiered cake in two separate flights, each tier carefully packed in tissue in a separate package.

The cake weighed 58 pounds and cost $92. Smith is Denver district sales manager for British Overseas Airways.

Choose Color To Flatter

When decorating or redecorating your home, pick the colors you like best and which are the most becoming to you and plan your color scheme accordingly — regardless of period or current fashion fads. And, unless you're a hermit, make certain the entire family is considered during the selection process.

It's a good idea to take swatches of existing colors — i.e., a bit of drapery fabric, a patch of wallpaper, or a tiny tuft of carpeting — when purchasing new items. This way you'll make sure your color choices will blend while the furnishings are still in the store — not at home, when it's too late.

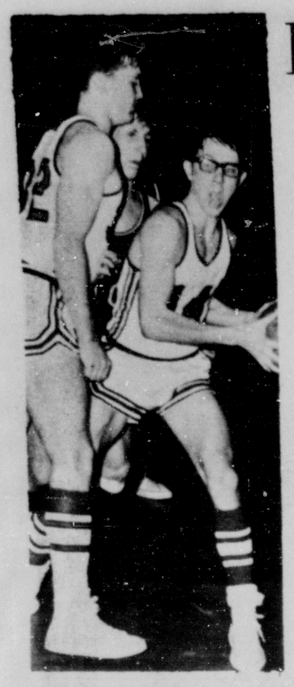

When contemplating new items, try to avoid too many new colors. Stay within the shades or hues of the existing color scheme to maintain a coordinated look.

And remember to use color for a purpose. Vivid tones can brighten a dark room. Sunny colors can add warmth to a room with a northern exposure and cool colors can add serenity to a room facing south or with large windows.

Free Throws Add Third Win

SIKESTON'S DAVID HACKNEY (14) seems to be in some kind of pain during Saturday night's SEMO conference basketball clash at the field house with Kennett. Hackney is only shouting instructions to teammate Ed Throop who is screening Hackney's defensive man. The Bulldogs won the encounter, 35-33, and evened its season record at 3-3.

Sikeston's varsity basketball team evened its season record at 3-3 Saturday night at the field house with a 35-33 SEMO conference win over Kennett.

The Bulldogs of coach N. P. McDaniel won its first game in three battles at the domed stadium, using free throws as its main weapon in downing the Indians.

The win was the third of the week for SHS, who had taken Scott County Central Tuesday and Caruthersville Friday before engauging the Indians Saturday.

The game was about as bad as the weather outside, which was rain, sleet and snow, as neither team displayed much offense and relied almost on their defense to provide the winner.

Kennett led 24-19 going into the final eight minutes of action which was the most action filled part of the battle as both teams raced to record the league win.

Sikeston managed only 13 points the first half, falling behind after an 8-5 first quarter lead. The Dogs rambled back with a 16-9 edge in the fourth quarter to notch the win.

Coach McDaniels squad netted 15 of 26 free throws during the game, 10 of 15 of those in the fourth period while netting only seven field goals through the first three quarters.

The game was plagued by errors from the opening tip until the final buzzer as both teams made many turnovers.

Sikeston again had trouble finding the range on its field goal tries, something that had bothered the Dogs in their opening season losses to Cape Central and New Madrid on the tartan floor.

Senior forward Larry Lawrence had the most trouble with his shooting as many shots bounced off the rim although he hit three field shots and six free throws for 12 points and the leading roll on the offense.

Ed Throop was Sikeston's big gun though, as the 6-1 senior battled the boards and netted six of eight charity shots in the fourth period. Lawrence was 4 for 4 at the line in the fourth as the team hit 11 of 15 from the line in the period.

Throop tied the score at 31- all with 2:49 left in the game and then kept the team close until David Hackney drove in for a layup with eight seconds left for the final points of the game.

Kennett lost the ball with four seconds left as a technical foul gave the Dogs a free throw and the ball. Throop failed on the point conversion, but Hackney dribbled out the final seconds as the Dogs record soared to 3-3.

David Gilmer took game high scoring honors, rolling in 14 points for the Indians.

The loss was the third of the evening for the Indians who lost the B-game and freshman battles.

Coach McDaniels squad had until Friday to prepair for Charleston's visit. The BlueJays call in a SEMO conference game.

Frosh Top Kennett, 33-28

By DAVID CRADER

Coach Buddy Spears directed his Freshman Bullpups to a 33-28 win over the visiting Kennett Indians Saturday. For the Pups it was their first win of the season, and the victory opened the way for the JV and Varsity squads to make it a clean sweep in the Indian encounters.

The Freshmen managed to jump into a small lead in the low scoring contest, as they held the Indians to only two buckets in the first quarter while the pups connected for nine points. Each defense managed to keep the opponent from organizing any large scoring threat as the low half time score was still Sikestons', 15-12. The Pups never trailed through the contest as they continued to outscore the Indians in each quarter scoring before the game ended with the victory on the Pups records.

Pope Hunt and Bill Colwick lead the Pups in scoring as the duo connected for 13 and 10 points respectively Sikeston guards, Keller and Green followed in scoring for the Pups as they worked the ball for the Pups and hit for a total of eight.

Kennett's Freshman Indians were lead in scoring by Smith who tallied 10 of the teams total. Teammate Hale followed in the Indian scoring with 7 encounters.

Tomorrow night the Freshman squad will be traveling to Cape, to face the Cape Central Frosh in a 6:30 encounter.

SHS Wrestlers Lose At Cape

CAPE GIRARDEAU -- The Sikeston high school wrestling squad's record fell to 0-2 last week as the Cape Central Bengals defeated the Dogs 29-16.

The Dogs, who had lost to Charleston earlier, were unable to do anything in the lightweight classes, as the Bengals ran up eleven big points before Ray Loveless broke the ice in the 123 class with a tie. Loveless picked up two points for the grappling Bulldogs, as he and his Cape opponent battled to a 2-2 stand-off.

Randy Reynolds, who had moved into the varsity lineup only this week, picked up a key victory for Sikeston in the 137 lb division. Reynolds blanked Jackson of Cape 3-0, as he managed his points on an early period takedown. Dan Fugate came through for the Dogs also, as he defeated his adversary 3-0 in the 145 lb class.

Dereck Wilson racked up five big markers for Sikeston in the 165 lb class, as he pinned Cape's with only four seconds elapsed in the second period. Wilson, perhaps the Dogs most consistent wrestler, has won both of his early season matches and both have come the way of pins.

In the 175 lb division, Lee Payne did an excellent job for Sikeston as he out-decisioned Bob Jackson of Central 8-3. Payne's extremely quick mpves vaulted him into the key victory. With his victory, the Dogs trailed only 19-16 with two matches remaining, but the last two Sikeston wrestlers got pinned to give Cape the 29-16 victory.

Sikeston was to participate in the annual tri-State Tournament Saturday, but it was cancelled due to the bad weather. The Dogs next encounter is at home Monday night against Cape, as they get a chance to avenge Thursday's loss.

B-Bulldogs Win On Howard's F.T.

By MARK ADAMS

Odell Howard sank a free throw for Coach Larry Nickell's B-Bulldogs to give Sikeston a narrow 50-49 decision over Kennett's Indians Saturday night at the field house. The squeaker victory put the JV dogs over the .500 mark for the season, as they racked up their only three victories of the season this week to leave their record at 3-2.

Sikeston's Sam Tucker, who topped the JV Dogs in scoring with 14, had tied the contest up at 49-all with 24 seconds showing on the clock. As the seconds ticked away, the Dogs came back up with the ball and a desparate Kennett player fouled Howard to enable him to make the victory clinching toss.

Tucker, who has played a key part in all three of the Dogs victories this week was closely followed by Girard Hunt, who pumped in eleven with all coming in the first two periods. The early quarters were all Sikeston, as the Dogs lead by as much as eleven at one point.

Kennett claimed the encounters high point man though, as Mike Ford connected for 23 in a losing effort.

The Dogs have a chance to raise their record to a modest 4-2 this week, as they meet the Charleston Bluejays this Friday in a conference encounter.

Dawson's Prayers Answered

NEW ORLEANS AP — The telephone rang twice in the Kansas City Chiefs' locker room - "The White House calling," said an operator - and the result was a dramatic chapter in professional football history.

It was like something out of fiction.

The principal character was Len Dawson, the chiefs' veteran quarterback, half- sick, limping on a gimpy knee, tortured by news all week that he might be called in a nation - wide sports gambling probe.

"I just prayed to the Good Lord that I'd have the strength and courage to play a good game," Dawson said after leading the American Football League champions to an impressive 23-7 victory over the heavily favored Minnesota Vikings.

His strength held, and no one doubted his courage. But much of the inspiration he poured into this magnificent performance must have come from the nation's No. 1 football fan, President Nixon.

The President called Kansas City Coach Hank Stram first. He didn't talk to Dawson, but asked that Stram pass along a message to the Chiefs' players, Dawson in particular.

"He said he knew that there wasn't anything to the rumors that we were involved in early in the week," the Kansas City Coach said. "He told us to dismiss it from our minds and go out and play like champions."

After the game there was another call of congradulations to Stram and a private call to Dawson, who had to return the call from an ante- room in the Kansas City dressing quarters, with scores of news and radio men hanging over his shoulders.

"The world looks up to pro football players for courage," the President told Dawson.

"We try to exemplify what is good in professional football," replied the quarterback, his face shining with sweat and one finger stuck in his right ear to keep out the locker room noise. "I appreciate it, Mr. President. But it wasn't me, sir, it was the whole team that did it."

The telephone calls were significant.

Rumors have been flying about the head of the 34- year-old former Purdue star who was questioned by pro football authorities in 1968 when three Kansas City games were taken off the betting board for some mysterious reason and who was listed only this week as one who might be questioned in the current gambling probe.

The President now virtually has given him a clean bill. It must be assumed that the President has some close ties with the Justice Department, which is making the investigation.

As he undressed, a heavy bandage was noticed binding Dawson's left knee because of an injury which forced him to miss six games during the season. His slender, 190- pound frame had bruises from head to foot.

"I may not have shown it, but I was a bundle of nerves when I took the field," Len said. "After I had completed that first pass, I relaxed. Then I concentrated on football."

It was a brilliant performance. Poised, cool, showing no effects either from his damaged knee or the mental strain of the past week, he picked the powerful, favored Vikings apart, completing 12 of 17 passes for 142 yards. One was a 46- yard touchdown throw to Otis Taylor that broke Minnesota's spirit in the third period.

The entire season was one of aches, frustration, sorrow- and success- for the Chiefs' quarterback, who has thrown more touchdown passes than any other active quarterback. His father died during the season. But once he had 15 straight completions.

Dawson was asked in the dressin room if Sunday's game provided his greatest thrill in football.

"You can't get them any bigger," he said.

He was pale and appeared tired. He seldom smiled. He spoke so low that his words on many occasions were lost in the steamy, noise- filled air.

"You are 34 years old now and have been playing football 13 years," someone said. "Are you thinking of retiring?"

"Personally, I'd like to play next year but my wife may have other ideas," Dawson replied.

He called a small boy - Lenny, Jr., aged 11- to his side. Lenny wore a big red Kansas City button.

"Lenny wants me to play until he's big enough to help me," Len said, putting his arm around the proud, smartly - dressed youngster.

"My wife, Jackie, and daughter, Lisa - she's 15- want me to quit.

INTERNATIONAL PRINTING WEEK
January 11-17
Ben Franklin Never Had It So Good!
Benjamin Franklin (1706-1790) – statesman, inventor, scientist, philosopher, but first of all a printer! Born 262 years ago this month, Franklin helped to shape the nation's progress through printing. For this reason, International Printing Week honors him each year as the patron saint of printing.
Since Franklin's time, there have been revolutionary changes in the printing process. He would hardly recognize the modern, high-speed printing machines that we have installed within the past year. But Franklin would approve the quality of the product and the pride of craftmanship that still exists among the expert printers we employ today. Our aim is to produce printing that pleases

INDOOR BLUES

This beautiful plant of browallia shows you what you can grow indoors or outdoors. Browallia and exacum will both adapt to either situation. Both have blue flowers.

Two pretty plants that thrive in the house as well as the garden and boast that much-desired blue flower color are browallia and exacum. Neither of them has a common name but the Latin ones are pronounced just as you'd expect them to be.

Browallias are natives of South America and are half-hardy annuals in more northern climates. While several species are used in gardens, the best for both garden and indoor use is Browallia speciosa. This is a first-rate hanging basket plant.

The plants have slender stems which tend to become long, desirable for the hanging basket, but can easily be pinched frequently in order to make the plants bushy. Leaves are oval and pointed and blooms are either violet-blue or white.

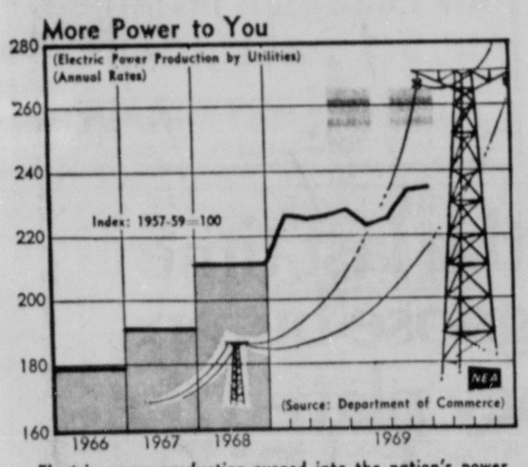

Seeds of browallia can be sown outdoors in July to have plants large enough to move indoors in September.

Exacum affine, the species most easily available, is really biennial, though usually treated as an annual. It will flower the first year from seeds.

The little plants have reddish stems, leaves are smooth and oval, flowers are not only blue, ringed with yellow in the throat, but are also fragrant.

This is a delightful plant for either indoor or outdoor garden. Start from seeds sown in May or June or lift plants from the garden and move them indoors well before frost.

Both browallia and exacum will flower all winter if set in a sunny window.

Electric power production surged into the nation's power lines at the rate of 222.4 at the end of August. The index figure, at the seasonally adjusted rate, represents a percentage of the 1957-59 average, taken as 100.

KEEPING ON TOP of the action, newsmen sometimes find themselves on bottom. In top photo, a cameraman can be seen in the small space separating a line of Montreal riot police and a group of French Unilingualists demonstrating in the Canadian city. In lower picture, newsman lies injured while fellow reporters summon aid and describe ensuing riot which caused thousands of dollars' damage.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — A raging October blizzard stranded five men and three women employes in the Summit House atop 14,110-foot Pikes Peak for five days. They had plenty of food and water and a standby generator furnished light and heat.

SAME TIME, SAME PLACE, AND THE SAME PROBLEMS

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. — Capital press corps members are having an easy time writing up their stories on the upcoming legislative session -- all they have to do is copy last year's story.

"Financial demands and taxes are the most pressing and unpleasant prospects facing Missouri's lawmakers..." the stories said in January, 1969, and it's the game for 1970. Governor Hearnes will call the Legislature together soon to consider financial problems, especially emergency appropriations to see the state through the end of the current fiscal year.

The special session will be concerned with the referendum petitions which have been submitted calling for a public decision on a Legislature - passed income tax increase. If the issue is not decided until the November general elections the state can not gain the tax money said to be needed right now. Same speculators say Governor Warren E. Hearnes will ask for a special election in April so that, assuming the increase is upheld, the state can begin collecting the additional money as soon as possible.

The headlines about the political feud between Governor Hearnes and State Senator Earl Blackwell of Hillsboro are in their second year now, and can still read about the same way. They have constantly differed over methods and the extent of revenue- raising for the state and Blackwell spearheaded the income tax increase referendum.

Two years ago, the Legislature went home from their session without approving any funds for capital improvements -- general construction -- and the Governor had to call them back to clean up the unfinished business. They approved $40 million in expenditures. Capital improvement requests from state agencies this time total more than $166 million, but the Governor has recommended that only $9.8 million, mostly for needed repairs, be approved. The Governor's figure includes $4.5 million to replace a chemistry building on the University of Missouri at Rolla campus -- the previous building being destroyed by fire in October.

Missourians can look for at least two special sessions this year-- one for emergency appropriations (and a rumored to oust Sen. Blackwell as president pro tem of the Senate) and another later on to set up the budget once the state has a better idea of how much money will be coming into the coffers.

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE DECIDES ON CLERKS, POLICE

While many state offices spent the last days of 1969 issuing year- end wrap - ups and holiday greetings, the Attorney General's office was busy issuing several opinions affecting county government.

County law enforcement came under scrutiny in three opinions. In one, county sheriffs were told that they could not make contracts with cities in their county to provide police services. The AG office ruled that, by statute, sherifs are conservators of the peace within their county, including the cities in that county and they cannot contract to perform a service which, by law, they are already required to do. However, since municipalities can and do hire full and part- time policemen they may contract with another city to provide these services if they wish.

Another opinion said that fourth class cities may hire policemen who do not live in that city. The Attorney General's office reasoned that law enforcement officials are specially trained people and if no one living in a city meets the qualifications set up, the city may go outside its limits to hire.

The third opinion on law enforcement said that any military personnel being confined in a civil jail for violation of military laws who escape can be convicted by violating Missouri law by escaping. The armed forces have given civil law officers the power to apprehend servicemen who are absent without leave and to confine them until military officials arrive to take custody. If the confined servicemen then escapes, he has broken Missouri law and can be sentenced to a maximum two year penitentiary term or a minimum six- month county jail term.

County and Circuit Court Clerks were also the subjects of opinions. The AG office said deputy county clerks do not have to live in the county for which they work, but must live in Missouri. Circuit Court clerks were told that they must have money which was deposited in court by parties pending the outcome of litigation of their case kept safe and readily available for payment.

The clerks can deposit such funds in a demand deposit, which pays no interest but allows the clerk to withdraw the money immediately, or in a time deposit. A time deposit, which does pay interest but requires at least 30 days notice to the bank, can be used only with the consent of a court order. The choice of which kind of deposit to make may be decided independently by the clerk or by written consent of parties involved in the lawsuit requiring the deposit.

Cats Fair Game Not Domestic Animals

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

To Wilbur's cat, heaven was a heap of garbage. Late one night, he found complete ecstacy in one of Mr. Hoople's overloaded garbage cans. In rading its contents, however, the noisy feline made such a racket that he awakened Mr. Hoople, who promptly nullified its nine lives with one accurate shot from his shotgun.

As each of the nine lives floated skyward, Wilbur got angrier and angrier with the result that by the time the last life was barely out of sight, Wilbur had Mr. Hoople arrested under a law that made it a crime to kill a domestic animal. But, while the law specified the various types of animals covered by the law, it did not specify a cat.

"The fact that a cat was not specified," argued Wilbur in court, "makes no difference. The law was intended to protect domestic animals and everybody knows that a cat is a domestic animal."

"Well, I don't know any such thing," was Mr. Hoople's answer. "As far as I'm concerned, a cat will scratch the hand that feeds it. It doesn't act like a domestic animal and I can't be convicted of killing one."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you convict Mr. Hoople of killing a domestic animal?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that criminal laws must be strictly construed; that since the law did not specify a cat as a domestic animal while specifying others, Mr. Hoople could not be convicted of killing a domestic animal.

What's more, concluded the judge, under the common law a cat was not considered a domestic animal since it was not looked upon as having any intrinsic value.

When's the last time you got goose bumps when they played the Star Spangled Banner?

It's been a while, right?

Well, then you're like a lot of us.

It seems that many of us are too grown-up to get excited about things like the Star-Spangled Banner any more.

You could almost say that patriotism makes us feel embarrassed.

Besides, it's hard to really feel patriotic when you hear so much about how this country is falling apart.

But, of course, America still has a Bill of Rights.

And free elections.

An incredibly high standard of living.

And a free enterprise system that lets you hitch your wagon to any star you want.

And plenty of other things you can't find anywhere else in this world.

Know what? Looking at it that way, America deserves a lot more credit than it's been getting.

One of the best ways to give this country the support it deserves is to buy U. S. Savings Bonds.

They strengthen the country so that it's better prepared to solve its problems.

And they happen to be one of the best ways to provide for your own welfare.

The interest is exempt from state and local income taxes. And you don't have to pay Federal tax until you cash your Bonds.

Buy U. S. Savings Bonds through the Payroll Savings Plan where you work. Or at your bank.

It'll give you a good feeling.

And a perfect excuse for getting goose bumps the next time they play the Star-Spangled Banner.

If they're lost, stolen, or destroyed, we replace 'em.

WHAT ABOUT MURDER?

It has been said the press and the courts are incompatible. Such has been the case since the November shotgun slaying of Charles Lenderman.

This newspaper and newsman came under fire from Judge Marshall Craig for releasing the name of Lenderman's son, who was suspected of firing the fatal shot. A stepson, it was reported later, also was implemented. Craig ordered the newspaper not to print the names.

It should be noted earlier in the year Judge Craig released the names of juveniles believed to have taken part in the assault of a young couple in Sikeston following a football game. It's true these offenders had repeatedly been in trouble and the public needed to know the outcome of the case, which the judge released.

It's also true that authorities should deal with juvenile offenders in general with more compassion than is given adult law violators. For instance, a young boy is caught stealing a bicycle and this is his first offense. Certainly it would not serve the public interest to publish this individual's name and possibly increase the animosity the youth holds against the other rights and law and order. But there is a great deal of difference between petty crimes and murder.

At the time the news story was released revealing the name of a suspect in the murder, the citizens of Sikeston were unaware as to whether there was a killer running around in the city.

In following juvenile proceedings it was learned one of the youths believed involved in the slaying was released from custody. This, too, was reported in the newspaper, although Judge Craig had said he did not want it published.

Would it not be wise to take into account the welfare of all the people regarding incidents this serious in nature? And too, would it not be wise for members of the juvenile court to sit down and discuss future procedures dealing with the publication of crimes that are felonies if committed by an adult.

An organized and uniform approach for the news media regarding such crimes seemingly would be in order and is needed.

Six Short Courses Will Be Offered

Six short courses are being offered by the University of Missouri county extension centers and councils.

These are cattle feeding and marketing; cotton futures; basic electricity and wiring; estate planning and farm corporations; interior design; and irrigation.

The cattle feeding course started Wednesday with 27 cattle feeders enrolled. Enrollments are being accepted in the other five courses through Friday at the University Extension Centers in Charleston, Bloomfield, New Madrid and Benton and at Sikeston high school, the James Cornett and Richard Downey office, telephone 471-5446. Programs and registration forms are available.

Classes start Jan. 22.

Instructors will be faculty and extension specialists from the University of Missouri in Columbia.

Classes will be from 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. each Thursday at the Sikeston high school.

Instructors are flown from the Columbia airport in University of Missouri planes which arrive in Sikeston at 5 p.m.

If 20 or more are not enrolled in each course, the course may be cancelled and fees returned to enrollees.

The basic electricity course is approved by the electrical underwriters. It will train a person to properly wire a building.

5 Arrested in Pemiscot County Liquor Raids

CARUTHERSVILLE - State liquor control agents and in Missouri State Highway Patrol troopers staged a series of raids during the weekend to culminate three months of investigations into liquor and gambling law violations in Pemiscot county.

Five persons were arrested late Saturday and early Sunday. Eventually, 20 business places will be involved in the liquor law crackdown in Southeast Missouri, authorities said Sunday. More than 25 liquor agents and troopers took part in the raids.

State authorities said the alleged illegal activities have been going on for some time without any attempt by local officials to halt them.

Seven places were raided in Caruthersville, the county seat, and in Hayti. The five persons arrested were charged with selling liquor and beer without a state license.

Nine bars and store owners also will be cited Monday by liquor control agents for various liquor and gambling law violations. State authorities also will audit the books of eight other establishments this week to check for other possible violations. All are in Hayti, Caruthersville and Steele, in this Bootheel section of the state.

This is the biggest crackdown effort by liquor control agents in recent years. Harry Wiggins, liquor control supervisor, said that undercover men, who have been in this area since last October, reported that local violators had little fear they would be closed down by Pemiscot County Sheriff Clyde Orton or other local officials.

Orton said he had received no complaints about alleged liquor or gambling violations. (State authorities also claim there is some prostitution evidenced in the investigation but no arrests have been made yet.)

Orton said he left enforcement to police departments in the three communities. He said:

"It's up to them (local police departments) how they want to run it. If it suits them, it's okay with me."

A Democrat, Orton has been in office 14 years.

The prosecuting attorney, Arthur Stevenson, a former assistant prosecutor from Kansas City, was unavailable for comment.

Those arrested and held in county jail here on $1,000 bond, charged with selling liquor and beer without a license are: J. B. Snow, 47, and his wife, Mae, 29, operators of the Big Apple, Hayti; Mary Pearl Isom, 41, operator of Paul's Place, Caruthersville; Sadie M. Covington, 79, operator of the Blue Room, Caruthersville, and Kathryn Slater, operator of Slater's Blue Note, Hayti.

The five persons charged with selling liquor and beer without a license were released on $1,000 bond each.

Also raided were the Climax Bar and Eddie and Jay's, in Caruthersville, and Janza's in Hayti. Owners of these places are expected to be cited later for unlawfully refilling liquor bottles.

Authorities said the following owners of business places will be cited Monday for various alleged violations as cause for license revocation:

Robert Jones, Kozy Korner, Caruthersville, for gambling; James, George and Vernon Klinkhardt, the Idle Hour, Hayti, for selling after hours; Kenneth Lawrence, owner of a general merchandise store in Hayti, for Sunday sales; Leo Brown, West End Grocery, Hayti, employing a felon.

Joseph G. O'Malley, owner of a store in Steele, for sale of liquor off the premises, and operator of a tavern, for sale and consumption of liquor on premises licensed for sale of 5 per cent beer; Troy O. Googe, City Tavern, Steele, sale off premises, and City Tobacco Store, sale and consumption of liquor on 5 per cent premises, and Herman C. Thompson, Club Zanza, Hayti, gambling.

Liquor agents indicated additional store owners would be cited for various liquor and gambling law violations.

Liquor Agents and Troopers gathered in Poplar Bluff late Saturday and divided into teams, enabling them to stage simultaneous raids. The operation was carried out in spite of sleet and snow that made roads hazardous.

Troopers reported that they found a "sizeable" dice game in progress at Paul's Place when they entered.

About 75 persons were inside, troopers said, and several of the players looked up as the raid began but then went on rolling dice until the officers moved to break up the game at the rear of the bar.

Symington, Eagleton Vote Liberal Way

WASHINGTON — Representative William L. Clay (Dem.), St. Louis, had a perfect voting record in support of liberal positions, Americans for Democratic Action said today. He was one of 28 members of the Ninety- first congress with 100 per cent records, the ADA said.

Missouri's two Senators, Stuart Symington and Thomas F. Eagleton (Democrats), also received high marks from the ADA.

The ADA's twenty - third annual report on the voting records of congressmen is based on selected roll- call votes, 15 in the House and 18 in the Senate. The final percentage is described as the congressman's "liberal quotient" - the degree of his support of liberal policy.

Eagleton had a 94 per cent record and Symington had an 89 per cent records.

Missouri's most conservative voting record was compiled by Durward G. Hall of Springfield, the state's only Republican Representative. His score was zero, the ADA said.

Ratings of other Missouri and southern Illinois members of Congress:

Missouri — James W. Symington, Clayton, 73 per cent; Richard Bolling, Kansas City, 73; Mrs. Leonor K. Sullivan, St. Louis, 67; William L. Hungate, Troy, 67; Bill D. Burlison, Cape Girardeau, 53; William J. Randall, Independence, 27; Richard H. Ichord, Houston, 20; W. R. Hull Jr., Weston, 13. All are Democrats.

JACK ANDERSON SAYS: Washington Bureaucracy swallows up its presidents; Nixon vainly battles mass inertia of bureaucracy; Fuddle Factory constantly finds for more jobs to do

Recalled Forces Named

SAIGON (AP) - The U. S. Command announced today the major units among the 50,000 American troops being withdrawn from Vietnam by April 15. They include the 1st Infantry Division, the 26th Marine Regiment and the 3rd Brigade of the 4th Infantry Division.

Also pulling out will be three squadrons of the Air Force's 12th Tactical Fighter Wing, Navy service support units and "a number of smaller combat support and service support units of all services," the command said.

These smaller units will include several artillery battalions and a civil affairs compant, it was learned. A 10 per cent out is also being ordered in many headquarters staffs.

Headquarters said the first units will begin moving out early next month. The 1st Infantry Division was the first Army division sent to Vietnam, 4½ years ago.

The latest withdrawal, the third ordered by President Nixon, will reduce the authorized U. S. troop ceiling in Vietnam to 434,000. It will bring the total number of American troops withdrawn since last July to 110,000.

The U. S. Command announcement said the 50,000 men being withdrawn in the next three months will include 29,500 Army, 12,900 Marines, 5,600 Air Force and 2,000 Navymen.

A weekly summary also issued today by the U. S. Command showed that American troop strength in Vietnam dropped 6,000 last week, to 467,500, the lowest since November 1967.

This is 16,500 men below the present authorized ceiling, but U. S. spokesmen said troop strength around the Christmas season always falls considerably below the authorized maximum because relation transfers to the States are expedited to get the men home for Christmas, while replacements are often delayed so the men can be home for the holidays.

Little fighting was reported today.

Official sources disclosed that American forces three weeks ago uncovered a major North Vietnamese communications center that intercepted at least 1,400 U. S. operational messages which presumably enabled enemy troops to escape U. S. ambushes, bombing and artillery strikes.

The sources said there was no evidence that the interceptions resulted in any American deaths. Nor were the North Vietnamese able to break any official codes, the sources reported. But they said many U. S. troops use unauthorized or "home-made" codes which the North Vietnamese easily deciphered.

The listening post was located in a bunker complex in the Bei Lei woods about 35 miles northwest of Saigon. The sources said 12 North Vietnamese who were fluent in English were captured and another was killed.

The American troops also captured legs showing interception of 1,500 U. S. radio transmissions, including positions for American ambushes and warnings to other allied aircraft of air strikes that were to be made.

K.C. Chiefs Day Proclaimed

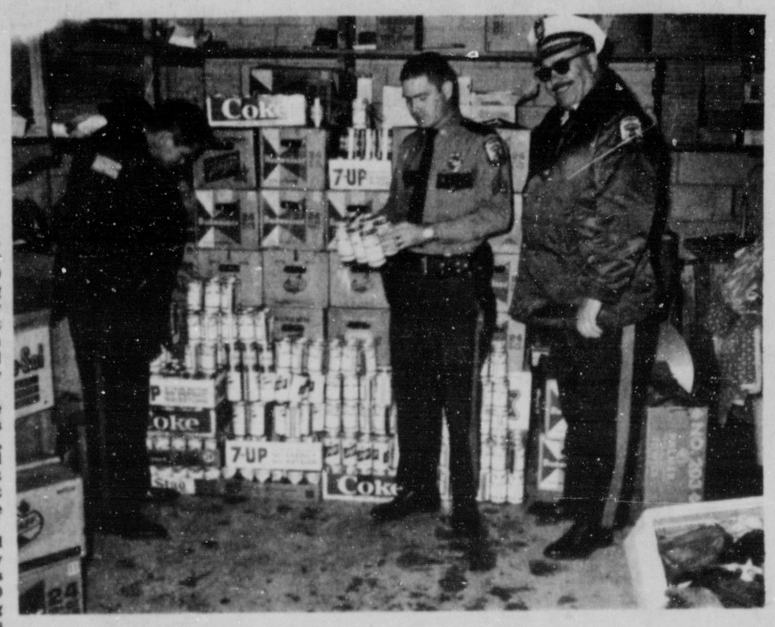

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) - Gov. Warren E. Hearnes proclaimed today "Kansas City Chiefs Day" and urged Missourians "to join in offering congratulations to the Chiefs, taking full recognition of the success which comes to those who are united in the determined pursuit of excellence."

He said he was acting because "the world champion Kansas City Chiefs have delighted their many fans with a decisive 23-7 triumph over the Minnesota Vikings in the annual Super Bowl of Professional football, played on Jan. 11, 1970 in New Orleans."

Car Slides Off Road, Man Hurt

Gary Roberts, 18, Oran, was driving a 1964 Chevrolet Sunday at 2:30 p.m. on highway 77, one mile north of Oran, when his car slid off the ice road and struck a culvert.

He was taken to Southeast Missouri hospital, Cape Girardeau,where he was treated for back injury.

Raid Closes Hat and Cane Club

A seven- man police raid Sunday night resulted in the closing of the Hat and Cane Club and the arrest of owner Charles Hampton and two employes on charges of selling non-intoxicating beer without a license.

The raid, which was led by Police Chief Arthur Bruce, was made after two off- duty officers purchased beer in the tavern. More than 100 cases of beer were confiscated. Forty persons were in the tavern.

Hampton was released on $300 bond. The employes, Betty Sairs and Barbara Davidson, were released on their own recognizance. They were turned over to Scott County authorities on state charges.

License to opeate the tavern were revoked Saturday by agents of the State Department of Liquor Control after Hampton failed to appear for a hearing on charges of selling beer to minors.

Hearnes Calls Overriding of Veto Kick in Teeth to Missouri

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) - Gov. Warren E. Hearnes charged Sunday that the everriding of his veto to $2.3 million in St. Louis antipoverty funds represented a "kick in the teeth" to Missouri.

"There's nothing more I can do," said Hearnes, who confirmed a day earlier that his veto of the funds was overridden by the Office of Economic Opportunity.

The overriding of the veto climaxed weeks of negotiations on terms to be included in an agreement whereby Hearnes would approve the funds.

Temporary accord was reached between the governor and OEO late in December, but Hearnes threatened to let the veto stand last week unless wording of the agreement remained as he chose.

Focal point in the controvery was the controversial St. Louis - St. Louis County Legal Aid Society, which will receive $390,000 of the federal grant.

Point one of an eight-point agreement called for OEO to prohibit Legal Aid representation of any political party or organization advocating overthrow of the government.

As revised by OEO, the point reads that Legal Aid will not represent any party or organization "in connection with any activity of such organization intended or calculated the assist or pursue the goal of the overthrow of the constitutional form of government."

In a letter accompanying the decision to override the veto, OEO Director Donald Rumsfield wrote to Hearnes, "I regret that you do not feel that you can accept these necessary changes and withdraw your disapproval.

Court Voids Youth's Murder Conviction

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The Missouri Supreme Court today ordered Joseph Franz Arbeiter freed from a murder conviction because what he told a juvenile officer was inadmissible as evidence.

Arbeiter was 15 years old in December 1963, when he admitted stabbing Nancy Zanone to death in St. Louis. The juvenile court decided he should be tried in circuit court as an adult.

But in the trial the testimony of juvenile officer Donald Jones was admitted as evidence. Jones testified that young Arbeiter admited he hurt the woman.

"In the light of the objectives of the juvenile code and of the procedures of juvenile courts and court officers," the Supreme Court said, "the prohibition of our statute should be held to include statements made to a juvenile officer and presented to and considered by the court in the disposition of the case. . .

"We must conclude that the state does not have available to it legally admissible evidence of the defendant's guilt. Therefore, the only alternative is to order the discharge of the appellant (Arbeiter)."

The opinion, written by Commissioner Robert R. Welborn, was adopted by the court's division as its unanimous decision.

Communication Strides Predicted

"Communications in the 1970s", were described to the Optimist club by Lawrence "Barry" Casey, chief switchman for Southwestern Bell Telephone company, at the Rustic Rock. Inn.

"The large increase of computers being installed today may well mean that the houshold shopper may shop from their home by telephone," he said. "This could include a receiving television set at your phone, and make it possible to make a selection from the store's counters."

All this and more, too, may be happen in less than 10 years, according to Casey. He said that there were 30,000 computers installed by the end of 1966 and they now are near the 85,000 mark. By 1985 they will reach 150,000, he predicted.

"It is already predicted by medical authorities that with our fast change in communications that cancer research there are already discovered clues to cancer control that no one has yet seen," he said.

Although now available in a large size it will be only be a few years when the communication systems will be pocket size and may even be as small as a wrist band.

President Glenn Greene announced that a meeting of all boys interested in the Optimist club college scholarship contest will be held in the G building at high school Thursday at 7 p.m.

Biafra's Surrender Ends 30-Month-Old Civil War

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) - Biafra surrendered today after fighting 30 months in an effort to enforce secession from Nigeria.

Maj. Gen. Philip Effiong, left in charge in Biafra by Gen. C. Odumegwu Ojukwu, told the nation in a broadcast: "I am convinced now he struggle must be put to an end and stop the bloodshed that is going on ..."

He said he ordered a disengagement of Biafran army units and asked commanders to stop fighting. He appealed to the Nigerian leader, Maj. Gen. Yakubu Gowon, for an immediate cease-fire.

He said he would apply to federal unit commanders at Biafra's edges for conditions.

Effiong, a 45-year-old member of the Efik minority tribe in Biafra, said: "any question of a government in exile is repudiated by our people."

The surrender broadcast followed the capture by Nigerian federal troops of Uli airstrip, Biafra's last link to the outside world. The strip came under massive air attacks that reduced its roadbed runway to rubble, according to reliable sources in Lagos.

Ojukwu, leader of Biafra in its 32 months of secession from federal Nigeria, fled Sunday for an unknown destination.

The informants in Lagos said that after federal ground troops captured Uli, Soviet-made Ilyushin 28 bombers flown by Egyptians rained 1,000-pound bombs on he jungle airstrip and MIG17s piloted by white mercenaries strafed the strip with cannonfire.

Nevertheless, Joint Church Aid headquarters in Copenhagen, Denmark, said two of its planes were able to land at Uli with 20 tons of food and medicine early today—apparently before the massive air attacks.

Military sources said casualties were heavy among Biafrans who had assembled by the thousands in the area of Uli in hopes of getting out of the enclave, whose secession stemmed from tribal conflict after Nigeria became independent from Britain in 1960.

Biafran regulars continued to resist in the hours before the surrender broadcast.

Federal marine commandos reached Uli Sunday night, after bypassing the nearby town of Oguta, Lagos' informants said.

Ojukwu had fled, saying in a recorded broadcast he was going in search of peace and that he hoped to return soon. Reliable reports said he had taken his family with him.

In the surrender broadcast, Effiong said:

"I have had extensive consultation with leaders of our community, both military and civilian, and I am now convinced that the present bloodshed and suffering must stop."

Effiong said the leaders who had spoken of negotiating—presumably Ojukwu and his advisers—had left and therefore he decided to confer with other leaders to reach his decision.

There was expected to be little resistance to Effiong's capitulation among war-weary Biafrans.

He said, "Our people are now disillusioned."

Immediately afterward, a communique asked police offers to report to specific stations for further instructions.

He said a Biafran negotiating team was prepared to meet a federal team to work out terms of the surrender.

Britain and the United States readied a massive airlift of food and medicine as soon as the Nigerian government gave the word it would admit the planes.

A British Royal Air Force plane was scheduled to leave London today with 20,000 pounds of medical supplies, the vanguard of new government relief efforts for the war's victims. A British cabinet minister was dispatch to consult with Nigerian officials on the relief program, and preparations were made to send in British medical teams, army trucks for convoys, and engineers to help repair roads, bridges and airfields.

President Nixon ordered eight C130 cargo planes on a standby alert in the United States, with foul helicopters to be carried as cargo. They awaited word from Lagos that the Nigerian government would let them operate a relief lift.

Canadian Foreign Minister Mitchell Sharpe said his government also was making plans to provide transport, food, medical supplies and military observers to help achieve a just settlement.

Hard fighting continued in he southeast corner of the former British colony as Biafran regulars resisted the progress of federal troops. Military spokesmen in Lagos said there were heavy losses on borth sides.

A radio report from the French colony of Gabon, to the south of Nigeria, said the latest Biafran capital - Orlu- had fallen. Reports from Gabon added that panic- stricken members of the Biafran elite shouldred aside relief workers for the escape seats on the last relief planes leaving Uli.

"Your leader has fled," federal radio broadcasts told Ibo tribuesmen, backbone of the secession movement. It urged them to stay at home and await the arrival of federal troops to ensure their safety. Maj. Gen. Yakubu Gowon, Nigerian chief of state, appealed to the secessionist troops to stop fighting and report to federal commanders. He told his own forces to take special care of displaced persons and urged them to adhere strictly to the code of conduct.

A federal communique said Gowon had "warned all foreign governments, organizations and persons to desist forthwith from meddling in the internal affairs of Nigeria so that the suffering of the population in rebel- held enclaves should not be prolonged."

Ojukwu's destination was not known. There were unconfirmed reports that he had flown to the Portuguese island of Sao Tome, the base for Red Cross and church airlifts to Biafra. Other Biafran cabinet members arrived in Libreville, the capital of Gabon.

Candidate Bans Court Agrees to Rule on Red

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Supreme Court agreed today to decide whether states may forbid Communist Party candidates to run for office.

The court also will rule on the constitutionality of the 1954 Communist Control Act -- the finding by Congress that the party is a menace to the United States and should be outlawed.

A federal court in Minnesota had ordered the state to allow Communist candidates for president and vice president to appear on the ballot in November 1968. But the court said it could not rule regarding future elections and declined to pass judgment on the 1954 law.

The American Civil Liberties Union then appealed to the Supreme Court in behalf of the Communist candidates, raising both issues. The appeal will be heard this spring and a decision reached by June.

I-55 Stretch Up For Jan. 29 Letting

JEFFERSON CITY — Gov. Warren E. Hearnes reports on the latest developments on Interstate 55 from information supplied by Chief Engineer M. J. Snider.

Snider said that a 10.3 mile section in northern Ste. Genevieve county is included in a Jan. 29 letting. Although it was described as an expensive project the engineer expressed hope that acceptable bids would be received so that this contract can be awarded.

The only other uncompleted stretch south of St. Louis to the Bootheel between Fruitland and Festus is 20.4 miles in Perry County, where the engineer said progress on right- of- way acquisition is slow, and it appeared that the highway department will be forced to file condemnation suits against more property owners on the two sections of 93 and 11.1 miles than is normal.

"To date, we have been able to acquire only 63 per cent of the right- of- way by negotiation," he said. "Normally this figure should be about 85 to 90 per cent. Since funds are available at this time for these two sections we will continue to exert every effort to negotiate for as much of the right- of- way as possible. We will then file condemnation."

Soviet-China Word War Heats

TOKYO (AP) — The war of words between the Soviet Union and Red China heated up over the weekend with a Chinese protest note accusing the Russians of plotting to create two Chinas and a Russian broadside charging the Chinese Communists with "rabid anti-Sovietism."

Peking's official New China News Agency reported that the protest note delivered in Moscow accused the Soviet leadership of cooperating "with U.S. imperialism in the criminal plot of creating two Chinas."

The evidence offered by the Chinese was that news media of "the Soviet revisionist renegade clique" have described Formosa as a country. The Chinese— both Communiss and Nationalists—consider the island a province of China, to be reunited with the mainland when either regime gets control of both.

The Soviet counter-attack, the third such verbal broadside against the Chinese in six days, was loosed Sunday in the Communist party newspaper Pravda.

"Militarization of the country's entire life is under way on the pretext of a Soviet threat," Pravda wrote of Communist China. It said the Chinese press is teeming with calls to "get ready for war and natural calamities...intensify preparations for war."

Final Kidnap Suspects Caught

TEXARKANA, Tex. (AP) — Police burst into an apartment Sunday night and captured two men charged in the kidnaping of a 16-year-old girl.

The last of five men sought in the kidnaping, the two were identified as Booker T. Burkhalter, 24, alias Terry Anderson, of Dallas, Tex., and Jonnie Tasby, 21, of Lafayette County, Ark. When the officers entered, the two were lying on a bed watching "The FBI" television program.

Herbert Hoxie, special agent in charge of the FBI in Arkansas, said the men offered no resistance. They were unarmed.

They had been charged earlier in Thursday night's kidnaping of Karen Vickers, pretty, auburn-haired daughter of a Texarkana, Ark., grocer. Police said she was taken from the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Emmett Vickers, by three armed and masked men and held for 26 hours for $40,000 ransom.

The girl was freed unharmed Friday night at a Texarkana motel. The ransom was not paid.

The FBI earlier arrested Paul Lawrence Bryant, 21, and Joe Willie Beggett, 29, both of Dallas, and Hugh Mulzac Smith, 26, of Texarkana, Ark.

Jumbo Shakedown Flight Ends

LONDON (AP) — Pan American Airways' Boeing 747 Jumbo jet airliner touched down safely at Heathrow Airport today, launching a new era in the mass moving of the world's restless millions.

The Jumbo carried 361 nonpaying passengers and 19 crewmen, the largest number of persons ever to cross the Atlantic in one flight, as a dress rehearsal for the first regularly scheduled commercial flight between New York and London Jan. 21.

The touch down was late because of a three-hour delay in New York due to the traffic jam at Kennedy International Airport and "heavy paperwork," said Tom Flannigan, Pan American vice president for operations.

The passengers were Pan American employes and their families, and some families and officials of the U.S. Federal Aviation Agency.

Cervantes Calls for State to Share Tab

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Mayor A. J. Cervantes suggested Sunday night that the state begin picking up its share of the tab in view of Gov. Warren E. Hearnes' "active part" in operating the St. Louis police Department.

Cervantes' suggestion was in reference to Hearnes' appointment last Friday of Delbert Miller Jr. to replace Edward J. Walsh on the board of police commissioners.

The appointment was seen as insurance for selection of Lt. Col. Eugene Camp to succeed retiring police chief Curtis Brostron. Walsh was expected to favor Maj. John Doherty as chief.

"The governor has the ri t to select a board of commissioners," Cervantes said. "And when the state is so forthright in enforcing the law, it should also pick up its share of the operating cost."

Hearnes' appointment of Camp was also criticized over the weekend by two state senators from the St. Louis area, Republican A. Clifford Jones of LaDue and Democrat Raymond Howard of St. Louis.

Perot Offers $100 Million to Free POWs

WASHINGTON (AP) — H. Ross Perot, the Texas billionaire who failed in getting two plane loads of supplies to American prisoners held by North Vietnam, has come up with another unusual plan—$100 million offer to buy the captives' freedom.

Perot said Sunday he had made the offer, similar to the tractor deal made with Cuba for release of the Bay of Pigs prisoners, in a cable last week to North Vietnamese Prime Minister Pham Van Dong.

Until release of the prisoners is worked out, Perot further offered to supply everything needed to run the prisoner of war camps. And to sweeten the pot, he offered similar nonmilitary goods for needy North Vietnamese civilians.

He told of his offer on "Issues and Answers," an ABC television interview program.

Later Perot said he wished the $100 million figure, which he stated in an answer to panelist's question, had not "gone out over television."

But he insisted he would do anything he could to get the men freed.

"Cost is not the key issue," Perot said at a later news conference. "The key issue is will the North Vietnamese begin talking—is there something they need more than the men."

The offer Perot made to Hanoi was "to build needed facilities and supply food, medicine, or other items needed by the North Vietnamese people in exchange for the release of prisoners of war."

"If these proposals are not acceptable to you," Perot cabled Pham, "surely there is some basis on which you will agree to work directly with the people of the United States, allowing us to exchange items badly needed by the North Vietnamese people for these prisoners."

There has been no response to the offer, Perot said.

Asked if he would go as high as $100 million for a prisoner exchange, Perot said, "I certainly would. I know I could raise that much." He said that would average about $75,000 per man and he said it would be worth it to save the lives of the prisoners.

Perot said he became dedicated to the prisoner problem when "I met a 4½-year-old boy who had never seen his father."

Last month Perot spent more than $600,000 taking two chartered airliners on a 30,000-mile odyssey with gifts and messages for the prisoners. After flying to Bangkok, Thailand, Vietiane, Laos, and Copenhagen, Perot was forced to give up Dec. 31 when the Soviets refused him permission to deliver the gifts to Moscow for mailing to Vietnam.

Perot, 39, a Naval Academy graduate, parlayed a $100,000 investment into a fortune in the computer industry.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!
MISSION IMPOSSIBLE!

The unsuccessful mission of Texas industrialist, H. Ross Perot, to attempt to deliver Christmas packages to American servicemen being held captive by the Communist North Vietnamese should serve as an object lesson to those who still doubt the heartless nature of Communism. It would not harm the Reds to allow the prisoners - of - war to receive these gifts. In fact, it would be a propaganda victory for them to do so.

We were disturbed to hear that the Texas philanthropist was considering giving the packages to North Vietnamese orphans as a gesture of goodwill. It is highly probable that the orphans would never see the Christmas presents. If indeed they did, they would unquestionably be told by our enemy that the gifts were due to the benevolence of the "People's government."

There are enough war orphans in the South of Vietnam to be cared for first. There were many orphans behind the lines in Germany and Japan during World War II, but our obligation was to the children of the liberated areas, first and foremost. The same may be said to the war in Korea, or in any conflict. Caring for the suffering in enemy territory is a luxury that can be afforded after aid and assistance has been extended to every victim in the free territory.

We, therefore, hope that if Mr. Perot is considering this alternative it will be decided not to give the supplies to the Hanoi government or its representatives, but to turn them over to the best of the abilities of our soldiers. Any pressure that would be eased from the burdens of the Northern Communists would only hurt the changes for an early settlement of the war, and in the end cost more lives ... and product more orphans.

As the Sixties draw to a close, we are now facing the challenges of the Seventies in which the prospects for peace (and war) are uppermost in our minds.

President Nixon inherited the Vietnam war from Kennedy and Johnson administrations and has started the U. S. pullback from Vietnam which is due to be sharply accelerated. Withdrawal of an additional 200,000 U. S. troops is in the cards for 1970 and only massive and sustained offensive by the Communists would upset this timetable.

The Middle East is being watched as the most perilous point for an outbreak of war in 1970. What are the prospects for a peaceful settlement of the 22 - year - old Arab and Israeli conflict in the year ahead? Virtually nil is the opinion of diplomatic observers on both sides of the battle lines.

Experts also say that the possibility of China - Russa conflict has brought Russia and American negotiators together in Helsinki to discuss reduction of the multibillion dollar nuclear - arms race. By midyear, American negotiators believe it should be clear whether the Russians are ready to bring this competition under control.

This may, at first glance, sound gloomy but continuing reports give evidence that many things may be looking up.

SKIDS CAN BE AVOIDED ACCORDING TO EXPERT

"I skidded" is seldom a good excuse for a traffic accident, according to a prominent accident investigator.

F. William Petring, former Chief of the Vehicle Performance Branch of the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads and now a Michigan engineering consultant who specializes in investigating and re-constructing auto accidents, says that in almost every skidding accident the driver was at fault.

"While there are exceptions, a skid is almost always induced by some action on the part of the driver," Petring said. "Any change in speed or direction can bring about a skid, and these changes are usually caused by careless driving techniques such as over-braking, over-steering or over-powering."

When pavements are slippery he urged drivers to develop a sense of "feel" for the road to learn just how much traction is available. "By applying the brakes gently or by a quick, momentary throttle applications, the driver can learn immediately whether the car has any tendency to skid or 'fish-tail.' If it does, reduce speed and do all maneuvering – steering, braking, accelerating -- with a gentle, delicate touch," Petring advised.

Most important, when faced with an emergency situation on a slippery pavement, don't panic and slam on the brakes. This will lock the wheels and invariably cause a skid. Instead, pump the brakes with a rapid, intermittent action. This keeps the front wheels rolling and maintains steering control," he said.

A long - time member of the National Safety Council's Committee on Winter Driving Hazards, Petring added that these techniques are especially important during the winter months when pavements may be covered with hardpacked snow or ice. "Tests by the Council have shown that braking distances on glare ice may easily be as much as nine or ten times the normal, dry pavement distance," he reported. "Even with the help of traction aids such as snow tires, studs and chains, far slower than normal speeds are essential."

He said the Council's tests have disclosed that conventional snow tires are of little or no help in stopping on glare ice. Studded snow tires, on the other hand, reduce braking distance on ice by 19 per cent and provide about three times the pulling ability of regular tires.

"For severe snow and ice conditions," concluded Petring, "reinforced tire chains provide the ultimate in traction, reducing braking distances on ice by 50 per cent and providing about seven times the pulling ability of regular tires on ice."

A Prophet in His Time

It is not necessary to turn very far back into history to be reminded that great innovators and discoverers in science, medicine and education have faced ridicule and rebuff. Sometimes the rebuffs have been cruel. But each generation has had its entrenched establishment which scorned change and it is no different in our own time.

Despite the fact that there are literally thousands of grateful parents across this land who have raised their voices in praise of Glenn Doman and Carl H. Delacato and the Institutes for the Achievement of Human Potential in Philadelphia, spokesmen for the entrenched withhold their acceptance and pronounce petty dissenting opinions. Never mind that those opinions ignore the fact of thousands of youngsters who have benefitted from the Doman and Delacato programs.

For years these two men have been treating brain-injured children. They have demonstrated that their concepts will work, also, in solving such rampant ills as poor reading ability and other perceptual shortcomings. In recent years some institutions of higher learning, such as the University of Plano, in Texas, have applied their theories to higher education with great success.

The essence of their solutions is that a child, or student, develops neurologically in the first four or five years of life. An injury, premature birth, or environmental deprivation, may deter the youngster from traversing the inexorable pathways of development that every child must experience. When this happens, even though the boy or girl has good native intelligence and a sturdy body, he or she becomes a poor student, ill- adjusted to complex modern life.

Doctors Doman and Delacto go to the cause and let the symptoms fall away. If the student missed the developmental necessities in those first four or five years, he is taken over the pathway now. Nature permits this. There are strident voices in the established medical and related hierarchies which refuse to accept the testimonials of students, and ignore the successes that have enthused families in virtually every community in our land. Instead of heralding the breakthrough, they minimize, impugn, disparage and deter.

One wonders how long the innocent brain-damaged children of this generation must wait for this hurtful contrariness to subside.

Overcoming Price Resistance

The following observations were made by W. Heartsill Wilson, sales consultant, at a recent sales rally:

"In the casinos of Las Vegas you will never find a clock. Clocks remind us when it is time to stop working - they keep us from accomplishing anything. They'd soon go broke there with clocks on the walls."

"Almost anyone can make a living from 9 to 5. We're in competition with the world during those hours. But your measure of success is what you do from 5 to 11.

"If you use those hours to further your career, you can't help but succeed. It's true that you are in competition with the exceptional people from 5 to 11, but there are so few."

"I have yet to shake the hand of a successful businessman who was in a business that he didn't like."

"In the mind of every human being are two black boxes. One is marked Value and one is marked Price. When a salesman begins to talk, the prospect dusts off his two black boxes and soon the boxes begin to change in shape and size. Not until the box marked Value is larger than the one marked Price will a sale be made. This is an unfailing law. It is the salesman's job to build the value of his product until it overshadows the price tag."

The army patrol had camped next to a muddy river in the jungle and a private was sent to collect water. He returned shortly to his sergeant and said: "There's a big crocodile in the river; I'm afraid to get any water."

"Ridiculous," replied the sergeant. "That reptile is at least four times as scared of you as you are of him."

"Well, Sarge," said the private,"if that crocodile is even half as scared of me as I am of him, then the water in that river ain't fit to drink."

When he arrived in Vietnam in the early 1960s, the American intelligence officer was surprised to see a Vietnamese riding a donkey – while his wife, loaded down with bundles, trudged along behind. Upset at the lack of chivalry, he approached the man and asked: "Why do you ride while your poor wife walks behind?"

"Custom" grunted the man, jogging past.

A few years later, the officer was visiting the same village and spied the man again – he was still riding the donkey , but now his wife preceded him down the road.

"You probably don't remember me," said the officer,"but you told me a few years ago that your wife walked behind you because of custom. But now I see she's in front. Why the change?"

"Land mines," came the reply.

THE RESULTS OF HIGHER EDUCATION

Those who criticize our youth should not over-generalize. Many young people are patriotic, hard-working, and self-reliant.

Instead of only criticizing, we should try to determine what has caused some of the attitudes of young people today. A recent survey gives some interesting answers to this question.

This survey studied attitudes of young people, dividing them into those attending college and those who were not. A sharp difference was found between the two groups.

Seventy-one percent of non-college youth believed that belonging to a church was important, but only 42% of college students. Sixty percent of non-college youth believed that patriotism was important, but only 35% of those in college. Sixty-nine percent of the young people questioned who were not in college believed that "containing communists is worth fighting for," but only 43% of those in college.

The first thing we should learn from these statistics is that by no means all college students have developed erroneous attitudes. But we should also realize that college has a bad effect on many young people, causing far more of them than of those not in college to reject sound values.

One of the reasons is the disdain for values common among many college and university professors. Another is the large number of anti-American professors on college and university faculties, especially those supported by government funds and grants.

Parents should do all they can to teach their children sound values and patriotism, and they should support and send their children to only those colleges which will maintain those values.

NEW YORK (AP) — James Joseph O'Connell and a couple of his bachelor friends had rented a cottage on Cape Cod for the summer and were enjoying the hectic social life at Hyannis.

The fly in the ointment was a guy named Wimpy. Wimpy was fat, obnoxious and—above all else—greedy. Though not a resident of the cottage, Wimpy seemed to spend more time there than its legitimate occupants.

While there, he ate their food and consumed vast quantities of their beer.

The three roommates held a small gathering one Friday night. It was to be the trio, their dates and few selected guests— Wimpy not included. But you didn't have to invite Wimpy— he could smell free beer a mile away. He arrived early, waddled directly to the icebox and grabbed a beer.

That night Wimpy was in good form—two six-packs himself. This forced James Joseph into an unplanned trip to the local grocery for supplies.

Unfortunaely, the grocer had only one case of an obscure Midwestern beer left and it was warm. James Joseph squeezed the whole case into the freezer compartment.

Luckily, they didn't have to wait for it to cool. A friend arrived with another case already chilled, and James Joseph promptly forgot about the beer in the freezer.

He remembered it when supplies, thanks to Wimpy, began to get low again. The case was frozen solid. A man of ingenuity, James Joseph shoved the beer into the oven and turned it on.

Fortunately, still another friend showed up with a cold case— enough to see the pary to its end.

When jjames Joseph returned from taking his date home, he was greeted with a series of explosions from the kitchen. He had forgotton to remove the beer from the oven. Only about three cans had exploded. He placed the good cans in the icebox.

The next afternoon, James Joseph got the urge for a cold beer. He opened one of the baked cans, now just the right temperature.

One taste was enough. It tasted like low-grade bilge water. Too bad, thought James Joseph, a whole case wasted. Then he got an idea.

He raced to the grocery, purchased another case of that obscure Midwestern beer and stashed it in the icebox.

Wimpy arrived in the late afternoon.

"Got any cold beer?" he asked.

"Yup," said James Joseph. "I'll get it."

James Joseph went o the icebox, grabbed one of the baked cans and three of the good cans. He gave the baked beer to Wimpy and distributed two to his roommates who had been cued.

The roomates drained theirs as fast as they could and put in an order for another round. an order for another round.

"How about you, Wimp—another?" James Joseph asked.

"Er, no thanks. Still got some left," Wimpy said.

Wimpy nursed that one beer for four hours, while the other jovially quaffed dozens of cans.

In ensuing weeks, that case of beer became a prized possession. James Joseph and his roomates did have to switch to that obscure Midwestern beer, but it was worth it just to be able to say on one of Wimpy's less and less frequent visits:

"Wimp, can I get you a refill?"

"Er, no thanks, I've still got some left."

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON - Like every President before him, Richard Nixon has issued directives, delivered pronouncements, dictated memos and otherwise sought to bestir the vast federal bureaucracy.

He has put on a personal show of efficiency and has sounded solemn warnings that he expects renewed vigor from all federal workers.

But also like every past President, Nixon has made little impression upon the bureaucrats who respectfully note the presidential stirrings and then go on doing as they have always done.

Thoroughly frustrated, he fusses over the negative attitudes of most bureaucrats, fumes at their can't - be - done responses to his new ideas and chafes over the bureaucratic inertia he has encountered.

In exasperation, he has complained that government officials "spend one-half of their time writing papers to each other." He cites, as an illustration, the excess paper work that Washington demands from local and state authorities in return for federal grants. Over 30 major steps, involving more than 100 different forms and reports, often are required for a simple $1,000 grant.

–INSIDE THE WHALE–

Nixon's predecessors must be smiling indulgently on high. Franklin D. Roosevelt after struggling with the Naval bureaucracy compared the encounter to "boxing a featherbed." Dwight D. Eisenhower, who masterminded history's largest war, wound up on the losing side in what he called "the battle of Washington." And John F. Kennedy wryly likened his experience with the bureaucracy to "grappling with a whale."

Now comes Richard Nixon to grapple with the whale. After a year of valiant struggle, he has found himself in the whale's belly looking out.

The bureaucratic phenomena is wondrous to observe. Like a giant amoeba, it sort of slurps along, a shapeless blob, following the path of least resistance. It pushes out in every direction, and its substance flows into the bulges.

When it encounters a morsel, the bureaucratic amoeba flows around it and absorbs it. And when the bureaucracy can no longer contain its own bulk, it simply divides – one into two, two into four, and so on. Today one amoeba, tomorrow 16.

From another view, the federal apparatus resembles a marvelous, monstrous factory, which is engaged in the manufacture of a single, basic product; Confusion.

–THE FUDDLE FACTORY–

Call it the Fuddle Factory.

The maze of bureaucratic wheels, cogs and gears, spinning in different directions, often countering each other, would delight a Rube Goldberg. All the whirling and whirring creates the illusion of great industry. For all its movement, however, the Fuddle Factory goes nowhere.

The actual deminsions of the bureaucracy are known to no man, but some inklings can be gained from the 1967 Census of Governments. These figures show that an astrounding 81,299 government entities now exist in the United States. The breakdown:

U. S. government	1
State governments	50
Local governments	81,248
Counties	3,049
Municipalities	18,048
Townships	17,105
School districts	21,782
Special districts	21,264
Grand Total	81,299

All of which lays to eternal rest the notion that a missle is the most complex contrivance known to man. For each of the 81,299 entities of government is a moving part. within each entity are other moving parts, wheels within wheels, all going round and round.

–BUREAUCRATIC BEGINNING–

Consider the U. S. government. George Washington started out with nine executive agencies, employing a grand total of 1,000 federal workers. From this small bureaucratic beginning, the federal government has spread and swollen into a crazy patchwork of nearly 2,000 agencies, each itself a conglomeration of bureaus, sections, divisions and committees.

Out of sheer desperation, President Nixon has threatened "massive personnel cuts in every area of government." This betrays a certain naivete, however, about the bureaucracy's powers of self - preservation.

The Fuddle Factory constantly finds more, not less, fuddling to do. Lacking constructive work, the Fuddle Factory turns inward and produces for itself rather than for the people it is supposed to serve. Hence the bureaucratic dictum: expand or expire.

The Bureau of Indian Affairs provides an example. On the Pine Ridge Reservation in western South Dakota, the Oglala Sioux are recipients of $8,040 per household in bureaucratic services. About 1,400 government officials work full - time on the reservation, and an additional 425 work part-time. This doesn't include additional hundreds who work in district, area and regional offices.

The Fuddle Factory, then, could provide a live-in bureaucrat for every Oglala family.

Thus has fuddling become a fine art – from the most remote reservation to the fuddle capital of the free world in Washington.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

OUTSIDE LABOR:
See Cosa Nostra In Yablonski Killings

PITTSBURGH - It is outrageous for anyone to charge that the United Mine Workers leaders were involved in the execution of the Yablonskis. These were "hard" killings in the grimmest, smoothest, swiftest Cosa Nostra fashion. They were not the angry fashion of the miners who go for dynamite, blow off a back porch, or pepper man and house with shotguns. That's tradition.

Certainly the slayings could have come from the hands of a psychotic who read the script in Truman Capote's "In Cold Blood." But it's far more certain that these were mob murders. That's what the clues say to the professional probers.

First, the Yablonskis' fine house was cased for weeks. Obviously the killers knew every family move and habit of this UMW leader's routine.

When the killers came they cut the phone wires – so no communication if the victims weirdly survived for even a few moments after the gunmen left. They cut and deflated auto tires -- so no chase over the narrow, curving roads. They killed the women – so no outcry or call for help. They wasted few bullets, went for the head, in Mafia style. They picked up the cartridges – so no trace. And cleverly they chose New Year's Eve.

So there are federals who believe that these were pistols for hire – and the contact was made easily in the Mafia - laden, brutally controlled Southwest Pennsylvania Cosa Nostra combines.

Who hired them? Who would gain from the deaths? Whom did Joseph Yablonski threaten? With whom did he break?

These answers are vital not because there are unsubstantiated innuendos being hurled at UMW President W. A. (Tony) Boyle, from whom sympathy is as scarce as ice skates on the Nile, but because a feud is flaring which would make Hatfield - McCoy appear like a Palace Theatre vaudeville team. These ghastly murders could be the first of other killings springing from fury and revenge.

What motives would agitate the national mine union chiefs? The 64-year - old President Tony Boyle won – not lost – the election. The Labor Dept. has officialy decided not to investigate or set it aside, despite the request of Yablonski's lawyer. Thus Mr. Boyle could retire at 65, at a $50,000 annual pension. Furthermore, there are no federal investigations now endangering his control. There is an Office of Labor - Management and Welfare - Pension Reports division review of the mineral books. But the Justice Dept. has found no reason for criminal action. There is a civil suit for accounting of UMW funds. Little will come of this. And there are some charges of misuse of money involving special invoices for political contributions. But this was rectified and no government action is expected.

Jock Yablonski lost. The record shows that inside labor losers fade away. Remember Jim Carey of the electrical union and David McDonald of "steal." Who would molest them? They've faded. They've become unpersons in labor. So it would have been with Joseph Yablonski inside the miners though he was an official for some 35 years.

Who then would gain from these killings? Certainly not Tony Boyle or the UMW. Certainly not the labor movement.

Who feared Jock Yablonski? There are no federal probes under way in his arena. He was not about to testify or go secretly with information before a grand jury. Even dead, he cannot be silenced. There is his attorney, Joe Rauh, and his technical advisor on "black lung disease," Ralph Nader. They know what Yablonski knew. They were his brain trust, his passion, his battering rams ever pushing government agencies and Congress. And there are his two bitter and enraged sons. Certainly all these men would not hesitate to pour out what they know.

Were there, then, other forces pressing Yablonski? Could they have been from "the outside"? What did they want of him? They must be powerful and calloused to killing. It takes lethal skill to make contact with a contact who then goes to an intermediary to "make a hit" – especially such a killing and especially, too, by such professional assassins. Also it takes money – lots of it.

There will be answers to these questions eventually. But it will take time. There are at least two, perhaps three, killers. There is a driver for the getaway car. There are payoffs to be made.

However, these answers can't be wrought out of rage. Or from wild charges inspiring feuds, strikes, demonstrations. They'll come out of methodical investigation. And it is an educated guess that they'll lead no outsiders.

So the time has come to cool it – and for all sides to sit with the authorities and pool their information. Fighting an election for a $50,000 union presidency in a multimillion - dollar labor organization is one thing. But wildly trying to hang a triple - murder charge on anyone is another. It could only help the killers and their hirers and those who plan terror as a weapon inside labor.

Amateur Astrologist Predicts Problems For Armed Forces with Zodiac Parallel

Dear Ann Landers: I am an amateur astrologist who has had considerable success forecasting events for my family and friends. I was horrified when I read of President Nixon's lottery plan for selecting draftees for the United States Army. The thought of an entire batallion of men born under the same sign gives me the screaming meemies. It would, of course, be ideal if the sign augured well for patriotic action, venturing into the unknown, and following orders blindly. A combat unit of men fortified with the courage and confidence of a favorable horoscope would be impossible to beat. But what if the horoscope should warn against hazardous activities, venturing into unfamiliar areas and taking risks? Are you aware, Ann, that millions of people in this country refuse to make a move before consulting the zodiac to see if the stars are positioned favorably? It is not inconceivable that if the horoscope bade ILL, entire companies of men might rise as one, remain in their bunks and refuse to budge.

Do you have any views on this? - Zoe D. Ack

Dear Ack: Sherman was right. War is hell. No matter how the guys are selected. I doubt that a four-star astrologer in the Pentagon would improve the situation, but I'll pass your theory on to General Hershey.

Dear Ann Landers: I have been happily married for fifteen years. Before I knew my husband I was involved, intimately, with two men. I've never mentioned these relationships to my husband, although he is beautifully mature and would probably have been most understanding. Now, the problem:

Last week while shopping in a crowd I saw one of the shadows from me past. I have no idea if he saw me because I ran from the store like a criminal escaping the police. After I gathered my wits, I was ashamed of myself. This man was a friend as well as a lover. Now I wish I had behaved like a lady, greeted him graciously, asked about his family and told him about mine. On the other hand, maybe I was smart to leave well enough alone.

Had I encountered the other man from my past it would have been a different story. Ours was a sick love-hate affair. He was really a skunk and I have no kind feelings or warm memories of him. Furthermore, he's the kind of a louse who would probably make trouble for me.

I am upset and troubled by my childish behavior. Yet, maybe I did do the right thing. If I run into my former friend-lover again should I greet him graciously or should I avoid him? - Agonizing In Fort Wayne.

Dear Ag.: Your spontaneous reaction was an emotional one. It was undoubtedly rooted in an indefinable fear of him or, more to the point, of yourself. Now that you can think about the situation rationally, you are ashamed of yourself for not behaving maturely. If you should encounter your old friend again you could probably handle the situation with maturity and grace. I would not recommend exchanging phone numbers or suggesting that the two families get together socially, but I would hope you could greet him and behave civilly.

Alcohol is no shortcut to social success. If you think you have to drink to be accepted by your friends, get the facts. Read "Booze and You - For Teen-Agers Only," by Ann Landers. Send 35 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

PRESIDENT AND GREAT AMERICAN CELEBRATE DAY

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Mrs. Mary Grimes, who was 107 Friday, received a telegram of congratulations from someone else celebrating the same day - President Nixon.

Nixon, who was 57, said it "was flattering to know that my birthday coincides with that of such a great American lady."

Mrs. Grimes, who lived on a farm near Cuero, Tex., before moving to Houston 15 years ago, received a birtday card from President Lyndon B. Johnson on her 105th birthday.

Her daughter, with whom she lives, said she is very independent and refused to leave the farm as long as she could care for herself.

Mrs. Grimes reared nine children and a granddaughter.

Drug Abuse Discussed By Harmon at Meeting

NEW MADRID — A small vial of a drug placed in the city's water supply is potent enough to send all inhabitants "on a trip," Detective Sergeant Dan Harmon, head of the drug and narcotic division of the Cape Girardeau police force, told a meeting Thursday of the Woman's Club.

In his talk on drug abuse and explaining the potency of drugs, Harmon said a minute amount placed on the point of a pin is enough for ten "trips."

Sgt. Harmon told of the increasing problem of youth drug addiction, and gave crime statistics attributed to maintaining the closely drug habit.

He was critical of persons who are advocating legalizing drugs. He said countries where drugs once were legal and are now banned expressed amazement the United States would consider legalizing drug usage.

Laxity by the Mexican government, Harmon noted, made drug smuggling control a greater problem for the United States.

The group was shown a display of illegal drugs, syringes and equipment used by drug addicts. Following his talk, questions by the group were answered by the sergeant.

Mrs. Robert Seemann, president, presided during a business meeting. Nine members answered roll call by naming a drug. Mrs. Douglas Trerice was a guest.

A donation of $150 was made by the club to the junior high band uniform fund being sponsored by the American Legion. At the request of band director, Bob Donze, a committee of Mrs. Jim Edwards, Mrs. Leo Hedgepeth and Mrs. Charles Hatley, was named to assist in selection, purchase and distribution of the uniforms.

Mrs. Seemann was hostess for the meeting. Mrs. F. M. Baird and Mrs. Hatley served as co-hostesses.

ONLY A SINGLE QUEEN...

BLETCHLEY, England (AP) — One thing Bletchley's carnival queen won't be this year is married.

Married women have won the title two years in a row and town fathers say it isn't fair to single teen-agers.

"Single girls haven't been able to compete against the self-confidence of a married woman," said Cecil Bowden, a carnival official, explaining why the contest is being restricted to unmarried entrants.

"You can't really expect girls of 17 and 18 to have the composure or experience of a woman of 25 with a couple of children."

WHEN THERE'S A WILL...

DENVER (AP) — Prior to his marriage to Jane Giardino of Denver, London-born Sydney Smith decided he wanted a wedding cake from Harrods in his home city.

But store officials told him they couldn't guarantee safe arrival. So Smith flew to London, and he and his sister, Marsha Smith, brought back the three-tiered cake in two separate flights, each tier carefully packed in tissue in a separate package.

The cake weighed 58 pounds and cost $92. Smith is Denver district sales manager for British Overseas Airways.

Pork chops, which are good simply rolled in flour and fried, are a real taste treat when seasoned with lemon, onion and spices.

SWEET LEMON CHOPS
one medium white or yellow onion
one or two lemons
4-8 pork chops, about ½ inch thick
powdered sugar
nutmeg
salt and pepper
flour

ROLL chops in flour and brown in skillet in hot fat. PLACE on baking sheet (I prefer broiler tray, but any flat pan will suit). Salt, pepper. SPRINKLE about ¼ teaspoon nutmeg and 1 Tablespoon powdered sugar on each chop. SLICE lemon and onion about 1/8 inch thick. Put a slice of onion topped with a slice of lemon on each chop. BAKE at 350 degrees about 30 minutes. Serve hot.

SHORT CUT: Use lemon-pepper seasoning and onion salt instead of fresh onion and lemons.

NOTE: Save end of lemon after slicing. When finished handling onion, rub lemon on hands to take away onion smell.

SUGGESTION: Serve with sweet potatoes baked at 350 degrees until done (about 45 minutes with skins on). Split potatoes and butter, salt and pepper, as you would white potatoes.

For desert, place drained pineapple slices in a bowl and pour one can of sweet, red cherries into them. Set back, and allow pineapple to redden. Serve with pound cake and whipped topping.

TOO MANY, WAY TOO MANY!

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A young nurse in the medical section of the police department says she's not bitter over sweets - just certain she'll never order another box of them through the mail.

In attempting to help a cousin promote a project for Campfire Girls, Geraldine Norris said she ordered 250 boxes of chocolates from a company in Chicago.

Instead of the 250 boxes, Miss Norris said, she received 250 cases amounting to three tons of candy with a retail value of $6,000.

Miss Norris, who's also preparing for a Valentine's Day wedding, said efforts to return the cargo to Chicago were to no avail.

She is attempting to locate a group interested in selling the candy.

WELL/PRESERVED

LAFAYETTE, Colo. (AP) — Tom F. Jones, 41-year-old paper salesman, said 30 photos from a 36-shot roll of camera film turned out well. He considered this very good, since the film came from a camera that had lain in a mountain wilderness more than two years, ever since Jones was hurt in a fall in Roosevelt National Forest while hiking. He found the camera about 30 feet from where he had fallen.

Designer Says:

Jewelry Should Flatter Proportions

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Marianne Ostier, who has been designing jewelry for 31 years, finds it second nature to look at the jewelry worn by every woman she sees. And often she'd like to — but doesn't — step up and say, "No, no, you ought to be wearing . . ."

A lot of the mistakes she sees have to do with proportion, Mrs. Ostier says. "If someone with a short neck wears long ear clips, the neck looks still shorter. If the woman with a long neck wears small ear clips that go up into the face, her neck appears too long.

"If a woman has short hands and wears a very small round ring, her hands look much shorter. With a high ring, you can elongate the finger. The marquis shape, widest in the center and tapering to a point at each end, is ideal for short fingers.

"And a bracelet that is worn on a heavy wrist should be a big bracelet, to make the wrist look smaller."

Although Mrs. Ostier often uses diamonds in her designs, she feels "diamonds don't do that much for a woman. They show a lot of glitter. But colored stones have much more influence on a woman.

"Eighteen carat gold is a soft color and becoming to wear; sometimes it has one or two diamonds to accentuate it."

Mrs. Ostier advises women to consider their profile when choosing jewelry to wear around the face. It is her opinion that button earrings do nothing for the profile.

A sculptor when she married a jeweler in Austria, Mrs. Ostier went back to school to learn jewelry design. One of her first ideas — which proved one of her most successful and the most copied — was that the application of sculpting ideas could move jewelry away from flatness. Diamonds used to be set down into the metal, greatly reducing their sparkle because little light could get to them.

She began using metal on more than one plane and she set stones up on stems, so that a flower pin, for example, took the shape of a real flower instead of being as flat as the photograph of a flower.

The Ostiers moved their jewelry business to the United States in 1941, and she had been carrying it on alone since her husband's death two years ago. But business details, which were her husband's province, so frustrated her that she decided to close shop. Some 405 pieces of jewelry still on hand were sold at auction at Parke-Bernet Nov. 19 and 20.

Her jewelry pieces are one-of-a-kind, "because I always had enough ideas to go on to something new." However, in the sale was a diamond starburst broach similar to one given to Julie Nixon Eisenhower for a wedding present. Mrs. Ostier duplicated that piece "because everybody wanted to see it."

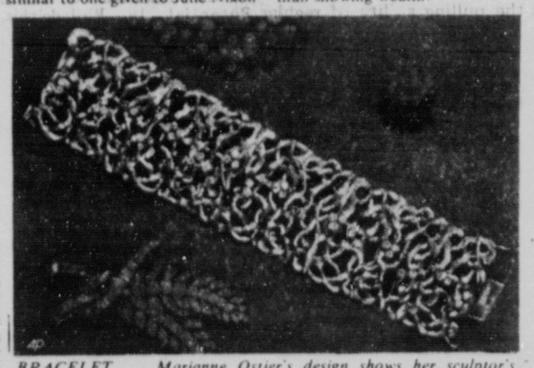

Her favorite color is purple and the jewelry stones she usually wears are amethyst and turquoise, both of which are becoming with soft purple dresses and both of which are flattering to her skin color. The turquoise also brings out the green of her eyes.

Neither amethyst nor turquoise are among the five gem stones Mrs. Ostier listed eight years ago in her book, "Jewels and the Woman". (They are diamond, ruby, emerald, sapphire, pearl.)

She says:

"With jewelry one has more possibilities to stress one's own type than with anything else.

"The aim of jewelry is to make women look more beautiful, to flatter them. I'm so conscious of color and becomingness; if one wears something that is becoming, one is much more comfortable than showing wealth."

BRACELET . . . Marianne Ostier's design shows her sculptor's approach to jewelry. The various twists of gold are not all on the same flat plane; the piece of jewelry is large, yet seems feminine because the open quality of the work gives it a light, airy feeling.

Choose Color To Flatter

When decorating or redecorating your home, pick the colors you like best and which are the most becoming to you and plan your color scheme accordingly — regardless of period or current fashion fads. And, unless you're a hermit, make certain the entire family is considered during the selection process.

It's a good idea to take swatches of existing colors — i.e., a bit of drapery fabric, a patch of wallpaper, or a tiny tuft of carpeting — when purchasing new items. This way you'll make sure your color choices will blend while the furnishings are still in the store — not at home, when it's too late.

When contemplating new items, try to avoid too many new colors. Stay within the shades or hues of the existing color scheme to maintain a coordinated look.

And remember to use color for a purpose. Vivid tones can brighten a dark room. Sunny colors can add warmth to a room with a northern exposure and cool colors can add serenity to a room facing south or with large windows.

Free Throws Add Third Win

SIKESTON'S DAVID HACKNEY (14) seems to be in some kind of pain during Saturday night's SEMO conference basketball clash at the field house with Kennett. Hackney is only shouting instructions to teammate Ed Throop who is screening Hackney's defensive man. The Bulldogs won the encounter, 35-33, and evened its season record at 3-3.

Sikeston's varsity basketball team evened its season record at 3-3 Saturday night at the field house with a 35-33 SEMO conference win over Kennett.

The Bulldogs of coach N. P. McDaniel won its first game in three battles at the domed stadium, using free throws as its main weapon in downing the Indians.

The win was the third of the week for SHS, who had taken Scott County Central Tuesday and Caruthersville Friday before engauging the Indians Saturday.

The game was about as bad as the weather outside, which was rain, sleet and snow, as neither team displayed much offense and relied almost on their defense to provide the winner.

Kennett led 24-19 going into the final eight minutes of action which was the most action filled part of the battle as both teams raced to record the league win.

Sikeston managed only 13 points the first half, falling behind after an 8-5 first quarter lead. The Dogs rambled back with a 16-9 edge in the fourth quarter to notch the win.

Coach McDaniels squad netted 15 of 26 free throws during the game, 10 of 15 of those in the fourth period while netting only seven field goals through the first three quarters.

The game was plagued by errors from the opening tip until the final buzzer as both teams made many turnovers.

Sikeston again had trouble finding the range on its field goal tries, something that had bothered the Dogs in their opening season losses to Cape Central and New Madrid on the tartan floor.

Senior forward Larry Lawrence had the most trouble with his shooting as many shots bounced off the rim although he hit three field shots and six free throws for 12 points and the leading roll on the offense.

Ed Throop was Sikeston's big gun though, as the 6-1 senior battled the boards and netted six of eight charity shots in the fourth period. Lawrence was 4 for 4 at the line in the fourth as the team hit 11 of 15 from the line in the period.

Throop tied the score at 31- all with 2:49 left in the game and then kept the team close until David Hackney drove in for a layup with eight seconds left for the final points of the game.

Kennett lost the ball with four seconds left as a technical foul gave the Dogs a free throw and the ball. Throop failed on the point conversion, but Hackney dribbled out the final seconds as the Dogs record soared to 3-3.

David Gilmer took game high scoring honors, rolling in 14 points for the Indians.

The loss was the third of the evening for the Indians who lost the B-game and freshman battles.

Coach McDaniels squad had until Friday to prepair for Charleston's visit. The BlueJays call in a SEMO conference game.

SHS Wrestlers Lose At Cape

CAPE GIRARDEAU -- The Sikeston high school wrestling squad's record fell to 0-2 last week as the Cape Central Bengals defeated the Dogs 29-16.

The Dogs, who had lost to Charleston earlier, were unable to do anything in the lightweight classes, as the Bengals ran up eleven big points before Ray Loveless broke the ice in the 123 class with a tie. Loveless picked up two points for the grappling Bulldogs, as he and his Cape opponent battled to a 2-2 stand-off.

Randy Reynolds, who had moved into the varsity lineup only this week, picked up a key victory for Sikeston in the 137 lb division. Reynolds blanked Jackson of Cape 3-0, as he managed his points on an early period takedown. Dan Fugate came through for the Dogs also, as he defeated his adversary 3-0 in the 145 lb class.

Dereck Wilson racked up five big markers for Sikeston in the 165 lb class, as he pinned Cape's with only four seconds elapsed in the second period. Wilson, perhaps the Dogs most consistent wrestler, has won both of his early season matches and both have come the way of pins.

In the 175 lb division, Lee Payne did an excellent job for Sikeston as he out-decisioned Bob Jackson of Central 8-3. Payne's extremely quick mpves vaulted him into the key victory. With his victory, the Dogs trailed only 19-16 with two matches remaining, but the last two Sikeston wrestlers got pinned to give Cape the 29-16 victory.

Sikeston was to participate in the annual tri-State Tournament Saturday, but it was cancelled due to the bad weather. The Dogs next encounter is at home Monday night against Cape, as they get a chance to avenge Thursday's loss.

B-Bulldogs Win On Howard's F.T.

By MARK ADAMS

Odell Howard sank a free throw for Coach Larry Nickell's B-Bulldogs to give Sikeston a narrow 50-49 decision over Kennett's Indians Saturday night at the field house. The squeaker victory put the JV dogs over the .500 mark for the season, as they racked up their only three victories of the season this week to leave their record at 3-2.

Sikeston's Sam Tucker, who topped the JV Dogs in scoring with 14, had tied the contest up at 49-all with 24 seconds showing on the clock. As the seconds ticked away, the Dogs came back up with the ball and a desparate Kennett player fouled Howard to enable him to make the victory clinching toss.

Tucker, who has played a key part in all three of the Dogs victories this week was closely followed by Girard Hunt, who pumped in eleven with all coming in the first two periods. The early quarters were all Sikeston, as the Dogs lead by as much as eleven at one point.

Kennett claimed the encounters high point man though, as Mike Ford connected for 23 in a losing effort.

The Dogs have a chance to raise their record to a modest 4-2 this week, as they meet the Charleston Bluejays this Friday in a conference encounter.

Dawson's Prayers Answered

NEW ORLEANS AP — The telephone rang twice in the Kansas City Chiefs' locker room - "The White House calling," said an operator - and the result was a dramatic chapter in professional football history.

It was like something out of fiction.

The principal character was Len Dawson, the chiefs' veteran quarterback, half- sick, limping on a gimpy knee, tortured by news all week that he might be called in a nation - wide sports gambling probe.

"I just prayed to the Good Lord that I'd have the strength and courage to play a good game," Dawson said after leading the American Football League champions to an impressive 23-7 victory over the heavily favored Minnesota Vikings.

His strength held, and no one doubted his courage. But much of the inspiration he poured into this magnificent performance must have come from the nation's No. 1 football fan, President Nixon.

The President called Kansas City Coach Hank Stram first. He didn't talk to Dawson, but asked that Stram pass along a message to the Chiefs' players, Dawson in particular.

"He said he knew that there wasn't anything to the rumors that we were involved in early in the week," the Kansas City Coach said. "He told us to dismiss it from our minds and go out and play like champions."

After the game there was another call of congradulations to Stram and a private call to Dawson, who had to return the call from an ante- room in the Kansas City dressing quarters, with scores of news and radio men hanging over his shoulders.

"The world looks up to pro football players for courage," the President told Dawson.

"We try to exemplify what is good in professional football," replied the quarterback, his face shining with sweat and one finger stuck in his right ear to keep out the locker room noise. "I appreciate it, Mr. President. But it wasn't me, sir, it was the whole team that did it."

The telephone calls were significant.

Rumors have been flying about the head of the 34- year-old former Purdue star who was questioned by pro football authorities in 1968 when three Kansas City games were taken off the betting board for some mysterious reason and who was listed only this week as one who might be questioned in the current gambling probe.

The President now virtually has given him a clean bill. It must be assumed that the President has some close ties with the Justice Department, which is making the investigation.

As he undressed, a heavy bandage was noticed binding Dawson's left knee because of an injury which forced him to miss six games during the season. His slender, 190- pound frame had bruises from head to foot.

"I may not have shown it, but I was a bundle of nerves when I took the field," Len said. "After I had completed that first pass, I relaxed. Then I concentrated on football."

It was a brilliant performance. Poised, cool, showing no effects either from his damaged knee or the mental strain of the past week, he picked the powerful, favored Vikings apart, completing 12 of 17 passes for 142 yards. One was a 46- yard touchdown throw to Otis Taylor that broke Minnesota's spirit in the third period.

The entire season was one of aches, frustration, sorrow- and success- for the Chiefs' quarterback, who has thrown more touchdown passes than any other active quarterback. His father died during the season. But once he had 15 straight completions.

Dawson was asked in the dressin room if Sunday's game provided his greatest thrill in football.

"You can't get them any bigger," he said.

He was pale and appeared tired. He seldom smiled. He spoke so low that his words on many occasions were lost in the steamy, noise- filled air.

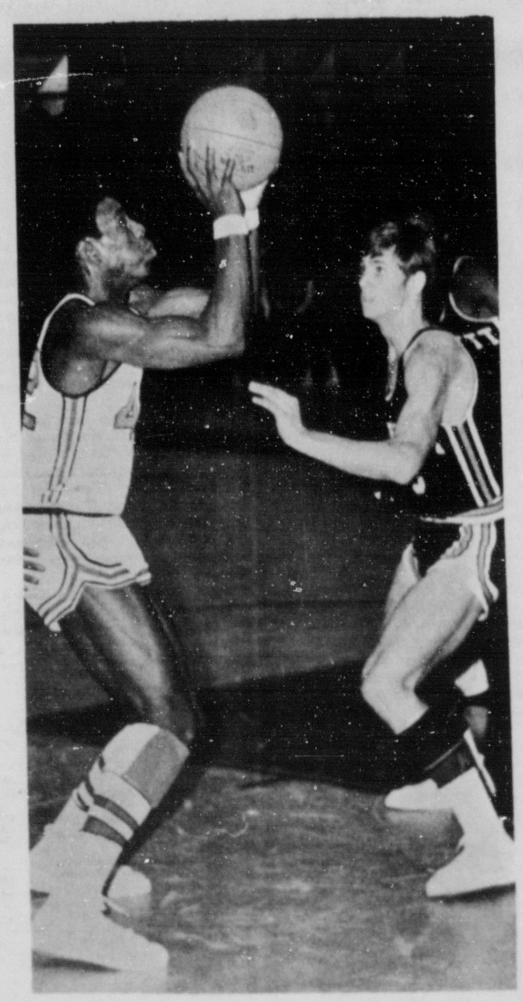

"You are 34 years old now and have been playing football 13 years," someone said. "Are you thinking of retiring?"

"Personally, I'd like to play next year but my wife may have other ideas," Dawson replied.

He called a small boy - Lenny, Jr., aged 11- to his side. Lenny wore a big red Kansas City button.

"Lenny wants me to play until he's big enough to help me," Len said, putting his arm around the proud, smartly - dressed youngster.

"My wife, Jackie, and daughter, Lisa - she's 15- want me to quit.

LARRY LAWRENCE, left, displays his form for Kennett defensive man during Saturday night's SEMO conference game at the field house. Lawrence scored 12 points as the Dogs edged the Indians 35-33 for its third win of the week.

Prep Poll Leaders Remain Unbeaten

Malden scored over 100 points against Neelyville and New Madrid rolled over eighth - ranked Portageville Friday night as the top two teams in the Daily Standard prep basketball poll continued to roll and remain the only unbeatens in the district.

Second ranked New Madrid toppled the Cape Girardeau Christmas tournament champion Portageville Bulldogs 67-44, Friday night.

Portageville suffered two defeats last week, losing a Tuesday encounter with county foe Parma, 58-35, but wasn't the only member of the poll to lose last week.

Third rated Poplar Bluff lost to un-ranked Dexter 70-60 and ninth - ranked Scott Central fell to Sikeston 73-63 while Delta C-7 bowed to Hayti North 65-63 after winning two games during the week.

Frosh Top Kennett, 33-28

By DAVID CRADER

Coach Buddy Spears directed his Freshman Bullpups to a 33-28 win over the visiting Kennett Indians Saturday. For the Pups it was their first win of the season, and the victory opened the way for the JV and Varsity squads to make it a clean sweep in the Indian encounters.

The Freshmen managed to jump into a small lead in the low scoring contest, as they held the Indians to only two buckets in the first quarter while the pups connected for nine points. Each defense managed to keep the opponent from organizing any large scoring threat as the low half time score was still Sikestons', 15-12. The Pups never trailed through the contest as they continued to outscore the Indians in each quarter scoring before the game ended with the victory on the Pups records.

Pope Hunt and Bill Colwick lead the Pups in scoring as the duo connected for 13 and 10 points respectively Sikeston guards, Keller and Green followed in scoring for the Pups as they worked the ball for the Pups and hit for a total of eight.

Kennett's Freshman Indians were lead in scoring by Smith who tallied 10 of the teams total. Teammate Hale followed in the Indian scoring with 7 encounters.

Tomorrow night the Freshman squad will be traveling to Cape, to face the Cape Central Frosh in a 6:30 encounter.

INTERNATIONAL PRINTING WEEK
January 11-17
Ben Franklin Never Had It So Good!
Benjamin Franklin (1706-1790) – statesman, inventor, scientist, philosopher, but first of all a printer! Born 262 years ago this month, Franklin helped to shape the nation's progress through printing. For this reason, International Printing Week honors him each year as the patron saint of printing.
Since Franklin's time, there have been revolutionary changes in the printing process. He would hardly recognize the modern, high-speed printing machines that we have installed within the past year. But Franklin would approve the quality of the product and the pride of craftmanship that still exists among the expert printers we employ today. Our aim is to produce printing that pleases.

INDOOR BLUES

This beautiful plant of browallia shows you what you can grow indoors or outdoors. Browallia and exacum will both adapt to either situation. Both have blue flowers.

Two pretty plants that thrive in the house as well as the garden and boast that much-desired blue flower color are browallia and exacum. Neither of them has a common name but the Latin ones are pronounced just as you'd expect them to be.

Browallias are natives of South America and are half-hardy annuals in more northern climates. While several species are used in gardens, the best for both garden and indoor use is Browallia speciosa. This is a first-rate hanging basket plant.

The plants have slender stems which tend to become long, desirable for the hanging basket, but can easily be pinched frequently in order to make the plants bushy. Leaves are oval and pointed and blooms are either violet-blue or white.

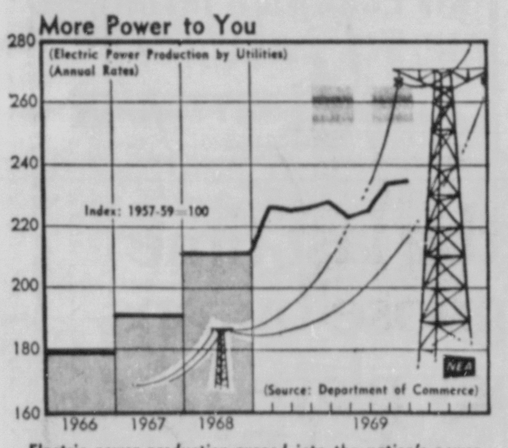

Seeds of browallia can be sown outdoors in July to have plants large enough to move indoors in September.

Exacum affine, the species most easily available, is really biennial, though usually treated as an annual. It will flower the first year from seeds.

The little plants have reddish stems, leaves are smooth and oval, flowers are not only blue, ringed with yellow in the throat, but are also fragrant.

This is a delightful plant for either indoor or outdoor garden. Start from seeds sown in May or June or lift plants from the garden and move them indoors well before frost.

Both browallia and exacum will flower all winter if set in a sunny window.

Electric power production surged into the nation's power lines at the rate of 222.4 at the end of August. The index figure, at the seasonally adjusted rate, represents a percentage of the 1957-59 average, taken as 100.

NARCOTICS DRIVING LAW?

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — A Kentucky Crime Commission conference of police officials from throughout the state has proposed a law against motorists under the influence of narcotics — similar to drunken driving statutes.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP)

— A raging October blizzard stranded five men and three women employes in the Summit House atop 14,110-foot Pikes Peak for five days. They had plenty of food and water and a standby generator furnished light and heat.

SAME TIME, SAME PLACE, AND THE SAME PROBLEMS

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. — Capital press corps members are having an easy time writing up their stories on the upcoming legislative session -- all they have to do is copy last year's story.

"Financial demands and taxes are the most pressing and unpleasant prospects facing Missouri's lawmakers..." the stories said in January, 1969, and it's the game for 1970. Governor Hearnes will call the Legislature together soon to consider financial problems, especially emergency appropriations to see the state through the end of the current fiscal year.

The special session will be concerned with the referendum petitions which have been submitted calling for a public decision on a Legislature - passed income tax increase. If the issue is not decided until the November general elections the state can not gain the tax money said to be needed right now. Same speculators say Governor Warren E. Hearnes will ask for a special election in April so that, assuming the increase is upheld, the state can begin collecting the additional money as soon as possible.

The headlines about the political feud between Governor Hearnes and State Senator Earl Blackwell of Hillsboro are in their second year now, and can still read about the same way. They have constantly differed over methods and the extent of revenue- raising for the state and Blackwell spearheaded the income tax increase referendum.

Two years ago, the Legislature went home from their session without approving any funds for capital improvements -- general construction -- and the Governor had to call them back to clean up the unfinished business. They approved $40 million in expenditures. Capital improvement requests from state agencies this time total more than $166 million, but the Governor has recommended that only $9.8 million, mostly for needed repairs, be approved. The Governor's figure includes $4.5 million to replace a chemistry building on the University of Missouri at Rolla campus -- the previous building being destroyed by fire in October.

Missourians can look for at least two special sessions this year-- one for emergency appropriations (and a rumored to oust Sen. Blackwell as president pro tem of the Senate) and another later on to set up the budget once the state has a better idea of how much money will be coming into the coffers.

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE DECIDES ON CLERKS, POLICE

While many state offices spent the last days of 1969 issuing year- end wrap - ups and holiday greetings, the Attorney General's office was busy issuing several opinions affecting county government.

County law enforcement came under scrutiny in three opinions. In one, county sheriffs were told that they could not make contracts with cities in their county to provide police services. The AG office ruled that, by statute, sherifs are conservators of the peace within their county, including the cities in that county and they cannot contract to perform a service which, by law, they are already required to do. However, since municipalities can and do hire full and part- time policemen they may contract with another city to provide these services if they wish.

Another opinion said that fourth class cities may hire policemen who do not live in that city. The Attorney General's office reasoned that law enforcement officials are specially trained people and if no one living in a city meets the qualifications set up, the city may go outside its limits to hire.

The third opinion on law enforcement said that any military personnel being confined in a civil jail for violation of military laws who escape can be convicted by violating Missouri law by escaping. The armed forces have given civil law officers the power to apprehend servicemen who are absent without leave and to confine them until military officials arrive to take custody. If the confined servicemen then escapes, he has broken Missouri law and can be sentenced to a maximum two year penitentiary term or a minimum six- month county jail term.

County and Circuit Court Clerks were also the subjects of opinions. The AG office said deputy county clerks do not have to live in the county for which they work, but must live in Missouri. Circuit Court clerks were told that they must have money which was deposited in court by parties pending the outcome of litigation of their case kept safe and readily available for payment.

The clerks can deposit such funds in a demand deposit, which pays no interest but allows the clerk to withdraw the money immediately, or in a time deposit. A time deposit, which does pay interest but requires at least 30 days notice to the bank, can be used only with the consent of a court order. The choice of which kind of deposit to make may be decided independently by the clerk or by written consent of parties involved in the lawsuit requiring the deposit.

If You Were the Judge

Cats Fair Game Not Domestic Animals

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

To Wilbur's cat, heaven was a heap of garbage. Late one night, he found complete ecstacy in one of Mr. Hoople's overloaded garbage cans. In rading its contents, however, the noisy feline made such a racket that he awakened Mr. Hoople, who promptly--nullified its nine lives with one accurate shot from his shotgun.

As each of the nine lives floated skyward, Wilbur got angrier and angrier with the result that by the time the last life was barely out of sight, Wilbur had Mr. Hoople arrested under a law that made it a crime to kill a domestic animal. But, while the law specified the various types of animals covered by the law, it did not specify a cat.

"The fact that a cat was not specified," argued Wilbur in court, "makes no difference. The law was intended to protect domestic animals and everybody knows that a cat is a domestic animal."

"Well, I don't know any such thing," was Mr. Hoople's answer. "As far as I'm concerned, a cat will scratch the hand that feeds it. It doesn't act like a domestic animal and I can't be convicted of killing one."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you convict Mr. Hoople of killing a domestic animal?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that criminal laws must be strictly construed; that since the law did not specify a cat as a domestic animal while specifying others, Mr. Hoople could not be convicted of killing a domestic animal.

What's more, concluded the judge, under the common law a cat was not considered a domestic animal since it was not looked upon as having any intrinsic value.

When's the last time you got goose bumps when they played the Star Spangled Banner?

It's been a while, right?

Well, then you're like a lot of us.

It seems that many of us are too grown-up to get excited about things like the Star-Spangled Banner any more.

You could almost say that patriotism makes us feel embarrassed.

Besides, it's hard to really feel patriotic when you hear so much about how this country is falling apart.

But, of course, America still has a Bill of Rights.

And free elections.

An incredibly high standard of living.

And a free enterprise system that lets you hitch your wagon to any star you want.

And plenty of other things you can't find anywhere else in this world.

Know what? Looking at it that way, America deserves a lot more credit than it's been getting.

One of the best ways to give this country the support it deserves is to buy U. S. Savings Bonds.

They strengthen the country so that it's better prepared to solve its problems.

And they happen to be one of the best ways to provide for your own welfare.

The interest is exempt from state and local income taxes. And you don't have to pay Federal tax until you cash your Bonds.

Buy U. S. Savings Bonds through the Payroll Savings Plan where you work. Or at your bank.

It'll give you a good feeling.

And a perfect excuse for getting goose bumps the next time they play the Star-Spangled Banner.

If they're lost, st'en, or destroyed, we repiace 'em.

WHAT ABOUT MURDER?

It has been said the press and the courts are incompatible. Such has been the case since the November shotgun slaying of Charles Lenderman.

This newspaper and newsman came under fire from Judge Marshall Craig for releasing the name of Lenderman's son, who was suspected of firing the fatal shot. A stepson, it was reported later, also was implemented. Craig ordered the newspaper not to print the names.

It should be noted earlier in the year Judge Craig released the names of juveniles believed to have taken part in the assault of a young couple in Sikeston following a football game. It's true these offenders had repeatedly been in trouble and the public needed to know the outcome of the case, which the judge released.

It's also true that authorities should deal with juvenile offenders in general with more compassion than is given adult law violators. For instance, a young boy is caught stealing a bicycle and this is his first offense. Certainly it would not serve the public interest to publish this individual's name and possibly increase the animosity the youth holds against the other rights and law and order. But there is a great deal of difference between petty crimes and murder.

At the time the news story was released revealing the name of a suspect in the murder, the citizens of Sikeston were unaware as to whether there was a killer running around in the city.

In following juvenile proceedings it was learned one of the youths believed involved in the slaying was released from custody. This, too, was reported in the newspaper, although Judge Craig had said he did not want it published.

Would it not be wise to take into account the welfare of all the people regarding incidents this serious in nature? And too, would it not be wise for members of the juvenile court to sit down and discuss future procedures dealing with the publication of crimes that are felonies if committed by an adult.

An organized and uniform approach for the news media regarding such crimes seemingly would be in order and is needed.

Six Short Courses Will Be Offered

Six short courses are being offered by the University of Missouri county extension centers and councils.

These are cattle feeding and marketing; cotton futures; basic electricity and wiring; estate planning and farm corporations; interior design; and irrigation.

The cattle feeding course started Wednesday with 27 cattle feeders enrolled. Enrollments are being accepted in the other five courses through Friday at the University Extension Centers in Charleston, Bloomfield, New Madrid and Benton and at Sikeston high school, the James Cornett and Richard Downey office, telephone 471-5446. Programs and registration forms are available.

Classes start Jan. 22.

Instructors will be faculty and extension specialists from the University of Missouri in Columbia.

Classes will be from 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. each Thursday at the Sikeston high school.

Instructors are flown from the Columbia airport in University of Missouri planes which arrive in Sikeston at 5 p.m.

If 20 or more are not enrolled in each course, the course may be cancelled and fees returned to enrollees.

The basic electricity course is approved by the electrical underwriters. It will train a person to properly wire a building.

5 Arrested in Pemiscot County Liquor Raids

CARUTHERSVILLE - State liquor control agents and Missouri State Highway Patrol troopers staged a series of raids during the weekend to culminate three months of investigations into liquor and gambling law violations in Pemiscot county.

Five persons were arrested late Saturday and early Sunday. Eventually, 20 business places will be involved in the liquor law crackdown in Southeast Missouri, authorities said Sunday. More than 25 liquor agents and troopers took part in the raids.

State authorities said the alleged illegal activities have been going on for some time without any attempt by local officials to halt them.

Seven places were raided in Caruthersville, the county seat, and in Hayti. The five persons arrested were charged with selling liquor and beer without a state license.

Nine bars and store owners also will be cited Monday by liquor control agents for various liquor and gambling law violations. State authorities also will audit the books of eight other establishments this week to check for other possible violations. All are in Hayti, Caruthersville and Steele, in this Bootheel section of the state.

This is the biggest crackdown effort by liquor control agents in recent years. Harry Wiggins, liquor control supervisor, said that undercover men, who have been in this area since last October, reported that local violators had little fear they would be closed down by Pemiscot County Sheriff Clyde Orton or other local officials.

Orton said he had received no complaints about alleged liquor or gambling violations. (State authorities also claim there is some prostitution evidenced in the investigation but no arrests have been made yet.)

Orton said he left enforcement to police departments in the three communities. He said:

"It's up to them (local police departments) how they want to run it. If it suits them, it's okay with me."

A Democrat, Orton has been in office 14 years.

The prosecuting attorney, Arthur Stevenson, a former assistant prosecutor from Kansas City, was unavailable for comment.

Those arrested and held in county jail here on $1,000 bond, charged with selling liquor and beer without a license are:

J. B. Snow, 47, and his wife, Mae, 29, operators of the Big Apple, Hayti; Mary Pearl Isom, 41, operator of Paul's Place, Caruthersville; Sadie M. Covington, 79, operator of the Blue Room, Caruthersville, and Kathryn Slater, operator of Slater's Blue Note, Hayti.

The five persons charged with selling liquor and beer without a license were released on $1,000 bond each.

Also raided were the Climax Bar and Eddie and Jay's, in Caruthersville, and Janza's in Hayti. Owners of these places are expected to be cited later for unlawfully refilling liquor bottles.

Authorities said the following owners of business places will be cited Monday for various alleged violations as cause for license revocation:

Robert Jones, Kozy Korner, Caruthersville, for gambling; James, George and Vernon Klinkhardt, the Idle Hour, Hayti, for selling after hours; Kenneth Lawrence, owner of a general merchandise store in Hayti, for Sunday sales; Leo Brown, West End Grocery, Hayti, employing a felon.

Joseph G. O'Malley, owner of a store in Steele, for sale of liquor off the premises, and operator of a tavern, for sale and consumption of liquor on premises licensed for sale of 5 per cent beer; Troy O. Googe, City Tavern, Steele, sale off premises, and City Tobacco Store, sale and consumption of liquor on 5 per cent premises, and Herman C. Thompson, Club Zanza, Hayti, gambling.

Liquor agents indicated additional store owners would be cited for various liquor and gambling law violations.

Liquor Agents and troopers gathered in Poplar Bluff late Saturday and divided into teams, enabling them to stage simultaneous raids. The operation was carried out in spite of sleet and snow that made roads hazardous.

Troopers reported that they found a "sizeable" dice game in progress at Paul's Place when they entered.

About 75 persons were inside, troopers said, and several of the players looked up as the raid began but then went on rolling dice until the officers moved to break up the game at the rear of the bar.

Three Accidents

CHARLESTON — Friday at 11 a.m. at Morris Machine Shop on South 9th St., a parked 1961 Chevrolet pick-up truck owned by Earl Sindle, Charleston, was hit by a 1962 Chevrolet driven by Ernest D. Green, Charleston, police reported.

Green was given a citation for careless and reckless driving involving an accident.

Both the truck and auto were slightly damaged.

Friday at 3:20 p.m. at the intersection of Center and Market St., a 1969 International pick-up driven by Donald Edward Woodstock of East Prairie ran into a 1968 Ford driven by Mrs. Betty Eastman of Charleston, police said.

Minor damage was done to both vehicles.

Symington, Eagleton Vote Liberal Way

WASHINGTON — Representative William L. Clay (Dem.), St. Louis, had a perfect voting record in support of liberal positions, Americans for Democratic Action said today. He was one of 28 members of the Ninety- first congress with 100 per cent records, the ADA said.

Missouri's two Senators, Stuart Symington and Thomas F. Eagleton (Democrats), also received high marks from the ADA.

The ADA's twenty - third annual report on the voting records of congressmen is based on selected roll- call votes, 15 in the House and 18 in the Senate. The final percentage is described as the congressman's "liberal quotient" - the degree of his support of liberal policy.

Eagleton had a 94 per cent record and Symington had an 89 per cent records.

Missouri's most conservative voting record was compiled by Durward G. Hall of Springfield, the state's only Republican Representative. His score was zero, the ADA said.

Ratings of other Missouri and southern Illinois members of Congress:

Missouri — James W. Symington, Clayton, 73 per cent; Richard Bolling, Kansas City, 73; Mrs. Leonor K. Sullivan, St. Louis, 67; William L. Hungate, Troy, 67; Bill D. Burlison, Cape Girardeau, 53; William J. Randall, Independence, 27; Richard H. Ichord, Houston, 20; W. R. Hull Jr., Weston, 13. All are Democrats.
